SCHOOLS & COLLEGES.

TOP OF THE LIST IN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS
is the goal towards which all students must strive if they wish to achieve success. Every year hundreds of candidates fail to secure appointments because, although they may obtain good pass marks, they lack that little extra finish that makes all the difference between success and failure.
GREGG-TRAINED STUDENTS secure those extra marks because forty years' experience of the largest privately controlled group of schools in the world, with a staff of expert teachers, is at their service.
FIRST PLACE in the C.S. examination for Shorthand-Typists and FIRST PLACE in that for Typists were secured by a Gregg School student in November, 1934.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT.

MOTORIST FINED

(BEFORE MR. HANNAN.)

Patrick J. Wilson, a dealer, of Lismore road, Kimmage, was fined £2, and ordered to pay £3 5s. witnesses' expenses, on a charge of having driven a motor car without exercising reasonable consideration for vehicles and traffic.

Defendant did not appear, but was represented by Mr. Herman Good, solicitor.

Mrs. Margaret Meehan, of Kimmage, said that she was walking along Sundrive road, Kimmage, on the night of 6th March last with her husband, her sister and a gentleman friend, when a motor car came up behind them and ran into them. The driver of the motor car was not under the influence of drink. They were talking before the occurrence, and did not hear the car approaching.

Cross-examined by Mr. Good, witness denied that the party walking was scattered over the road. They were walking on the left-hand side of the road.

Mr. Hannan, in convicting, said that the defendant's real offence was that he had not very adequate lights.

TAXI DRIVERS SUMMONED

Six Dublin taxi-drivers were summoned for seeking "hires" at a point other than a recognised hazard. One of them stated that, in consequence of the tramway dispute, taxi-drivers were trying to meet the public as far as possible, and on the date in question were taking passengers to Shelbourne Park.

On undertaking not to repeat the offences the defendants were given the benefit of the Probation Act.

LED MOTOR CYCLE PATROL

Thomas Edge (18), a labourer, of Lower Kevin street, was summoned for having, while cycling, failed to keep to the proper side of the road.

The offence occurred on St. Patrick's Day, on the occasion of the State procession. Guard

INVESTMENTS OF AN INSURANCE CO.

£35,000 IN SPECIFIED SECURITIES

(BEFORE THE MASTER OF THE HIGH COURT.)

Mr. T. G. Marnan (instructed by Messrs. Arthur Cox (and Co.) applied on behalf of the Insurance Corporation of Ireland, Ltd., 4 and 5 Westmoreland street, Dublin, for an order that the sum of £20,000 transferred by them to the account of the Accountant-General of the High Court in respect of employers' liability insurance business, and the further sum of £15,000 transferred by them to the same account in respect of mechanically propelled vehicle insurance business might be invested in specified securities, and that the dividends as they accrued due on such investments might be paid to them.

Counsel said that the investments specified were: Great Southern Railway Debentures, Irish Sugar Company 4 per cent. Guaranteed Debentures, Fourth National Loan, the 1935 issue of Dublin Corporation Stock, and Cork Corporation Stock. He moved on the affidavit of Mr. John McCann, Simmonscourt Castle, Donnybrook, chairman of the directors of the corporation, who stated that the corporation was incorporated on 25th February last to undertake all kinds of insurance business, except life assurance, and all kinds of guarantee and indemnity business, except bond investment insurance, and, in particular, to carry on accident, employers' liability, workmen's compensation, fidelity guarantee, third party, burglary and robbery, theft, fire, marine, storm, motor or other vehicle, live stock, glass and mortgage or other investment and transit business. On 22nd February the Corporation had deposited the sums of £20,000 and £15,000, as mentioned, and they were desirous that the money might be invested equally as nearly as possible in the investments specified.

The Master granted the application.

A SWEEPSTAKE PRIZE

PORTUGUESE CITIZEN'S ACTION

(BEFORE THE MASTER OF THE HIGH COURT.)

The case of Francisco de Lemos, 52 Rua Consigtieri Pedroso, Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa, against Mrs. Amy M. Crawford, 205 Windermere road, Durban, South Africa, and the Sweepstake Trustees came before the Court on an originating summons on behalf of the plaintiff seeking a declaration that he is entitled to £573 15s. 6d., being the prize money payable in respect of a ticket which drew Uncle Batt in the Grand National of 1934, and interest on the amount.

Mr. Tobias (instructed by Mr. Hastings Dare Draper), for the plaintiff, said that Mrs. Crawford denied that he was the owner of the ticket, and said that it was her own and was bought with her own money, and that the plaintiff's name was put on it only for luck. The plaintiff, who was a resident of East Africa, was at present living in Portugal, and would be there for about six months. He was a Portuguese subject.

Mrs. Crawford resided in South Africa.

The Master directed that the case should be put into the judges' list for the following day.

Mr. H. Poole (instructed by Messrs. Travers Wolfe and Co.) appeared for Mrs. Crawford.

ALLEGED LIBEL

SUBPŒNA FOR L.G.D. SECRETARY

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE O'BYRNE.)

In an action for alleged libel, in which Patrick Conlon, Carrickmacross, is plaintiff and Dr. P. J. Deery, Corduff House, Carrickmacross, Leitrim, is defendant,

Mr. P. McGilligan (instructed by Messrs. Phelan and Co.), on behalf of the plaintiff, applied for a subpœna to issue to the Secretary of the Department of Local Government. He said that the matter complained of was contained in a letter written to the Local Government Department stating that the plaintiff had taken a bribe from Dr. O'Connell in connection with the appointment of Medical Officer of Health in an area of Co. Monaghan. The letter was sent to the Department through a solicitor acting on behalf of Dr. Deery, and the plaintiff desired to have the Secretary of the Department present in court with the letter. Counsel also asked the Court to fix a special day for the hearing of the action. Dr. O'Connell, from whom Mr. Conlon was alleged to have accepted the bribe, was a necessary witness. He could not leave his district without appointing someone to take his place, and for this reason it was necessary that a special day should be fixed.

Mr. Justice O'Byrne said that the jury list was a heavy one, and application for a special day would have to be made to the President. He granted the application for a subpœna as asked for.

A WINNING "SWEEP" TICKET

(BEFORE THE MASTER OF THE HIGH COURT.)

Mr. J. J. Mooney (instructed by Mr. A. G. Joyce) applied, on an adjourned motion, on behalf of Charles Buck, of Burton, near Kingston-upon-Hull, defendant in a action by Alfred Lound and Francis F. Smith, of Sproatley, near Hull, for an order dismissing the action for want of prosecution, the plaintiffs having, it was stated, failed to file an affidavit of discovery of documents, pursuant to an order of the Master, of 8th last February.

In the action the plaintiffs claimed to be entitled each to one-third share of the seller's prize of £1,000 in respect of a ticket which drew Windsor Lad in the Irish Hospitals' Sweepstake on the Derby of last year.

Mr. Lynn (instructed by Mr. Con Lehane), for the plaintiffs, having now produced the affidavit in court,

The Master made no rule on the motion, and directed that costs should be costs in the cause.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT

CORPORATION TENANTS

(BEFORE JUDGE SHANNON.)

There was a list of forty-five ejectment cases brought by the Dublin Corporation against its tenants because they were in arrears with their rents, many of them for over a year. In the majority of cases settlements were made under which the defaulting tenants agreed to pay up their debts by weekly instalments, and to pay the current rents punctually. Where these settlements were not come to ejectment orders were made.

Mr. T. F. Burke, assistant law agent, appeared for the Corporation.

Forde, who prosecuted, said that the defendant, who was carrying a boy on the bar of his machine, was "scorching" along Grafton street, beside the procession and ahead of the motor cycle patrol. The street was crowded at the time.

In reply to Mr. Hannan, witness said that the defendant had not acted in ignorance, but his conduct was more or less mischievous. A fine of 2s. 6d. was imposed.

BRITISH STATUES IN FRANCE

FRENCHMAN'S CURIOUS HOBBY

A Frenchman has made his hobby of compiling a list of British statues and monuments in France. He has already reached a total of 40, and hopes to attain the 50 mark before his research is ended. Kings, queens, saints, a dramatist, a scientist, a philosopher are all included in the list. The proportion of men to women is about two to one. Kings are most numerous, queens come next. Some of these monuments are centuries old; others only a few years. The complete list is as follows:—

Aix-les-Bains—Queen Victoria, who was a frequent visitor to this Savoy resort.

Angers, "second capital of England" in the time of the Plantagenets—Marguerite of Anjou, wife of Henry IV. In the David d'Angers Museum there are medallions of Lord Byron, James Watt, John Flaxman, Sir John Franklin, Sir William Temple, and John Wilkes. Finally, a statuette of Henry II.

Avignon—John Stuart Mill, who lived the last fifteen years of his life in Avignon, and died there. An avenue is also named after him in this Provençal city.

Barcelonnette, near the Italian border—The Duke of Berwick, natural son of James II., who was responsible for the annexation of the Barcelonnette valley to France.

Biarritz—King Edward VII., who was a frequent visitor there.

Boulogne-sur-Mer—Edward Jenner, English scientist and "inventor" of vaccination.

Cannes—King Edward VII.; a monument to St. George in memory of the Duke of Albany, erected by his mother, Queen Victoria; a statue to Lord Brougham, one time Lord Chancellor, who is hailed as the "discoverer" of Cannes as a winter resort.

Fontevrault, in the "Cemetery of Kings"—Richard Lionheart, Henry II. and his wife, Eleonore de Guyenne, and Isabelle d'Angoulême, who became the wife of King John Lackland. All four are represented by life-size statues.

Forcalquier, in Provence, east of Arles.—A monument to Henry III. and his wife, Eleonore of Provence, is to be inaugurated next September, when the 700th anniversary of their marriage is to be celebrated.

Fougeres—William the Conqueror, who is considered British, since he became King of England.

Le Mans—Berengaria of Navarre, who married Richard Lionheart, in St. Julian's Cathedral.

Lourdes—St. Margaret of Scotland; also Lord Russell, the Irish mountain-climber and admirer of the Pyrenees.

Lusaac, near Poitiers—John Chandos, "greatest of English captains," and Governor of Poitou for Edward III.

Mentone—Dr. James Henry Bennett, English physician, who recommended Mentone to his patients, and thus founded the popularity of this Riviera resort.

Montreuil—Lord Haig, who had his headquarters there for three years.

Nice—The Queen Victoria Memorial, which was inaugurated twenty-five years ago; also a statue of Ophelia, the heroine of Shakespeare's "Hamlet."

Paris—Edith Cavell, in stone, is in the Tuileries Gardens, where the twentieth anniversary of her heroic death is to be observed next autumn. Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, stands in the Luxembourg Gardens in the company of other French sovereigns; for she was Queen of France for a short period. William Shakespeare is guardian over part of the Boulevard Haussman, while Edward VII. stands in the street named in his honour near the Grands Boulevards.

Pontigny, near Auxerre, in the Yonne Department—A monument to St. Edmund of Abbendon, Archbishop of Canterbury from 1233 to 1240 A.D.

Rouen—The heart of Richard Cœur-de-Lion is buried in the cathedral, and there is a monument surmounting the tomb. There is also a statue of Henry Shortmantle.

St. Germain-en-Laye—A memorial chapel to James II., opposite the famous castle in which he spent the last years of his life. His shrine, the gift of Queen Victoria, attracts visitors every day.

Toulouse—A monument to St. Gilbert of Sempringham, in the Church of St. Sernin.

There is also a statue to Andrew Carnegie in Rheims, in front of the Carnegie Library; but, since the Scots-born philanthropist became American by naturalisation, it has not been included in the list of British statues. Further, in the American Church of Paris, there are stained glass memorials (almost life-size) to Thomas Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury, and John Knox, the Scottish reformer; but since they are neither statues nor monuments they are also omitted from this list.

Employment in Canada is increasing. The Dominion put over sixteen thousand more people to work during February, according to returns from the nine thousand leading firms reporting to the Bureau of Statistics. The greatest increase was in general manufacturing, but gains were also recorded in the metal mining industry, wholesale trade, shipping and highway and railway construction.

FLOODLIGHTING THE ABBEY

BRILLIANT JUBILEE SPECTACLE

Westminster Abbey, the illumination of which attracted national interest when first effected, will be floodlit on a gigantic scale this Jubilee year. In all nearly 130 of the most powerful lamps made in Britain will be used. Their total candle power will be more than 10,000,000.

For weeks men have been installing mammoth reflectors and thousands of yards of cables. The first part of the Abbey on which the lights will be brought to play will be the Henry VIII. Chapel. A rehearsal of the illumination of this is taking place to-night.

The rehearsal of the illuminations of the whole of the Abbey takes place later in the month, and will be watched by Colonel Crompton, the veteran pioneer of London's electricity supplies. He founded in Queen Victoria's days the firm which has been responsible for the supply of lamps and cables for the Abbey's illuminations this year.

The illumination of the Abbey has been so designed that every beauty of the famous Church's architecture will be clearly shown. Powerful lamps, some of a thousand watts each, some of 500, will play on the Abbey from surrounding buildings, as well as from the lawns around it. The power of the lamps will be concentrated on the architecture by reflectors, which are being so arranged that, although the spectacle will be brilliant, the illumination will be in keeping with the Abbey authorities' request that the floodlighting should not be garish.

CRICKET IN CANADA

DOMINION SCHOOLBOYS' CHALLENGE

Will Canada add another rival for the Ashes? The Dominion is, at all events, finding her pitch in the cricket field by sending over a team of schoolboys this summer to play matches against English public schools and Oxford and Cambridge Universities. Their tour has been arranged by the Overseas Education League. The boys will play at Downside, Uppingham, Rugby, Haileybury, Harrow, Stowe and Eton, and will be the guests of the M.C.C. at Lord's for the Gentlemen v. Players match in July.

The experiment is all the more interesting since Canada, unlike her close neighbours of the West Indies, has so far not paid conspicuous attention to our national summer game.

SCHOLARSHIPS IN AGRICULTURE

Attention is drawn to the announcement in our advertisement columns of a forthcoming competition for valuable scholarships offered by the Department of Agriculture, which is open to young persons who desire to obtain a thorough knowledge of technical agriculture or one of its associated sciences, with a view to (a) becoming qualified under the Department's programme of agricultural education, or (b) specialising in one or more branches of science as applied to agriculture. Scholarships are offered for candidates who wish to specialise in general agriculture, dairy science, veterinary science, and horticulture.

The scholarships tenable at the University Colleges are renewable, subject to satisfactory progress, for a total course of four years, and enable holders to obtain the most advanced technical training and a university degree. Those tenable at the Veterinary College are renewable on the same conditions for a course of five years and lead to the diploma of M.R.C.V.S.

In view of the early date of the examination prospective candidates are advised to apply at once for the form of application for admission to the examination, which together with all particulars, may be obtained, post free, from the Secretary, Department of Agriculture (Section G), Dublin.

CROCODILE HATCHED IN WARDROBE

Opening the door of her wardrobe at Manly, Sydney, Miss Margaret Bignall, a nineteen-year-old girl, found a baby crocodile, something over a foot long.

What had happened was that Margaret and her sister Jean, who live in the Solomon Islands, brought a crocodile's egg to Sydney, on a holiday, as a novelty to show their friends. But the egg hatched in the wardrobe, says Austral News, and the crocodile walked out. He is now living in the Sydney Zoo.

WORK OF IRISH LIFEBOATMEN

45 LIVES SAVED LAST YEAR

DUBLIN BRANCH'S APPEAL

SENATOR the Right Hon. Andrew Jameson, P.C., D.L., chairman of the City of Dublin branch of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution, presided at the annual meeting of the branch, held before a large attendance at 110 Grafton street, Dublin, yesterday afternoon.

Proposing the adoption of the report and statement of accounts, he said that he considered their financial year had been quite a good one, but nothing like what it ought to be, if they wished their lifeboats to be self-supporting. They were, however, doing everything that was humanly possible, and he was glad to say the Dublin people were doing all that they could.

"There is no use my telling you what an institution like this means to the country," he said. "We all know what the institution does, and how vital it is that our shores should be served so splendidly by our lifeboats and our lifeboatmen."

He referred to the loss suffered by the Dublin branch through the deaths of the Rev. Dr. J. Denham Osborne and Mr. C. G. Warner.

Mr. David Barry, O.B.E., vice-president, seconding the adoption of the report and statement of accounts, said that he was glad to see that they were getting so much support in Dublin that their position was growing a little better year by year. Notwithstanding that, the collections did not approach the actual expenditure which was devoted to the running of the lifeboats on the shores of Ireland alone. Were it not for their friends in Scotland, Wales and England, it was impossible to say what would happen.

Mr. Barry asked the people to give generously and liberally, so that our lifeboats might become self-supporting.

The motion was unanimously carried.

HIGHEST INCOME

The report stated that the total income received during the past year was the highest recorded in any one year since the establishment of the City of Dublin branch. The gross income from all sources (including a bequest of £100 from the late Mr. Bolton) amounted to £1,250 10s. 10d. This had enabled the committee to contribute £1,061 15s. 7d towards the upkeep of the other lifeboats round the Free State coasts, where the local income was insufficient for that purpose owing to the scarcity of the population.

The Committee again desired to record their thanks to the Ladies' Lifeboat Guilds, whose house-to-house collection formed the mainstay of the special effort; and also to the Ladies' Committee who organised the Lifeboat Ball in the Gresham Hotel and the play in the Abbey and Peacock Theatres, both of which made substantial contributions to the fund.

Grateful thanks were also passed to Major A. Whewell and the Special Effort Committee, of which he was chairman, and the helpers of the flag day sales.

45 PERSONS RESCUED

In appealing again for renewed and increased support, the Committee desired to emphasise the fact that there were now fifteen motor lifeboats on the coasts of the Free State, in addition to three pulling and sailing lifeboats. The Free State lifeboats were launched on service nineteen times in 1934, and rescued 25 lives; also 20 lives were rescued through shore boat services, making a total of 45 lives. Six vessels in distress were helped to safety.

It was hoped that the appeal for 1935 would receive a ready response from every Irish man and woman who was proud of the heroic work that is being carried out on the coasts by their fellow-countrymen, who risked their lives to save those in peril at sea.

THE LIFEBOATMEN

Mr. T. L. M. Fuge, District Organising Secretary, proposed the following motion:—"That the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery be re-elected President, and that the following form the Committee:—Chairman, Senator the Right Hon. Andrew Jameson, P.C., D.L.; Vice-Chairman, David Barry, O.B.E.; Hon. Treasurer, James F. Boydell; Hon. Secretary, R. N. Guinness; Chairman, Special Effort Committee, Major Arthur Whewell; and that the out-going Committee be re-elected, with the addition of Captain Alan Gordon."

He said that the lifeboats round the coast of Ireland were the most up-to-date and efficient of their kind anywhere—more efficient even than there had been in previous years. The spirit of the lifeboatmen also was absolutely splendid. The people of this country, he said, were apt to talk a great deal about themselves, the politicians perhaps more than anyone else. From experience and close study—it was his duty to go round the stations—he was prepared to say that there was not a finer type of men in the country than the lifeboatmen, and one never heard anything about them. Most of them were fishermen, but it was now getting extremely difficult to get lifeboatmen, because fishing as a trade was going out. The reason for this apparently was that the people of the Free State were not eating fish; or, another reason, all their fish was coming in from ports across the water. He thought that they could not get a better set of officers.

The motion was seconded by Mrs. Harding, and carried with acclamation.

HELPERS THANKED

Major Arthur Whewell, proposing a vote of grateful thanks to the Ladies' Guild and flag day helpers for their valuable services, said that they appreciated deeply the voluntary work which was being done year after year by the ladies.

Mr. R. N. Guinness, honorary secretary, seconded, and referred to "the awful uphill work of the collectors." Their debt to the ladies was one which could not lightly be spoken of; it was a very deep debt.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

A vote of thanks to the Press was proposed by Mr. W. Baird, who said that any brave deed of any lifeboatman never was allowed pass without the publicity which it deserved.

The Chairman seconded the vote.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Senator Jameson recorded presentations of the Institution's record of thanks for the valuable services for many years in Dublin to Miss E. Harvey Robinson, and to Mrs. E. Marsden, who was unavoidably absent.

The attendance included:—Senator the Right Hon. Andrew Jameson, P.C., D.L., Chairman; Mr. David Barry, O.B.E., Vice-Chairman; Mr. R. N. Guinness, Hon. Secretary; Major Arthur Whewell, Miss E. Harvey Robinson, Mrs. Marsden (jun.), Miss F. E. Latimer, Mrs. T. Wright, Mrs. Bate, Mrs. G. Harding, Miss R. Harding, Mrs. G. Bate, the Rev. H. Kunick, Mr. Walter Baird, Mr. C. J. Dunlop, F.S.I.; Mr. H. H. Grace, Miss A. E. Eivers, Mrs. J. S. Littledale, Mrs. F. G. Carry, Mrs. Cyril Fagan, Mrs. W. T. Callaghan, Mr. T. L. M. Fuge, district organising secretary; Mr. B. J. New

PLANS OF CITY BARRACKS

DESCRIPTIONS OF MINISTERS

POLICE FINDS AT HOUSES OF I.R.A.

DOCUMENTS relating to military barracks in Dublin, to the use of a machine gun, to garages in Dublin, and the cars in them, and to descriptions of Free State Ministers and ex-Ministers, were yesterday produced to the Military Tribunal during the trial of Dublin members of the I.R.A.

Charges of membership of an unlawful association, and of refusing to answer police questions had been preferred against—

Richard Batterberry, St. Kevin's Parade;
Patrick McElroy, Nash street, Inchicore;
Thos. Merrigan, Charlotte place;
John Nestor, Tram terrace, Phibsboro'.

When, at the outset, last Thursday, they would not plead, "not guilty" pleas were recorded by direction.

Mr. W. Black, K.C., prosecuted (instructed by Mr. John S. O'Connor) for the Attorney-General.

Guard Denis O'Brien, Dublin Castle, said he arrested Batterberry in the prisoner's home. He found maps and tracing paper, with some notepaper headed (in Irish): Irish Republican Army.

Mr. Black said the maps were of Beggar's Bush and Portobello Barracks, Dublin.

A small book found in the house of Batterberry contained the names of a number of Ministers and ex-Ministers and a description of who they were.

MACHINE-GUN DESCRIPTION

Guard Sherlock gave evidence of arresting McElroy. In the course of a search of McElroy's house, he found a number of documents, which included a description of a Thompson machine gun, with instructions for use, and a page of a notebook containing the names of garages in the city of Dublin, with the number of cars in each.

Detective-Sergeant J. R. Cruise, Dublin Castle, proved the arrest of Merrigan, in whose premises he said he found two documents containing Army Council statements and resolutions of 1934 Convention, held 15th and 16th September last.

Merrigan (cross-examining)—Were you ever a member of the I.R.A.?—I was.

Until what year?—Until 1926.

Did you ever hear this order read out at an I.R.A. parade and issued over the name of Frank Aiken, the present Minister for Defence?

President—Is this one of the documents put in in evidence?

Prisoner—No. It is a document dealing with non-recognition of the courts here.

Prisoner (to witness)—You took up arms against the Free State Army in 1922?—I did.

Why?

Witness—Do I have to answer that?

The President said that it had nothing to do with the present case.

The State evidence having concluded, the prisoners were invited to make their defence.

Batterberry said that he had been a member of "the Army" for a good number of years.

Merrigan said that he had been a member of the I.R.A. for the past nineteen years. He believed that only through physical force could the British connection in this country be broken.

THE STRIKE

"In the editorial columns of both the Irish Press and the Irish Times it was said that the round-up of Republicans some weeks ago was due to the fact that the I.R.A. had agreed to support the men in the Tramways Company who are out on strike. It is significant that during all the evidence there has been no mention of that fact. The Government used it as an excuse for the arrest and framed the charges afterwards.

"The order issued in 1925 by Frank Aiken for non-recognition of Free State 'enemy courts' is still in force, and it was Frank Aiken who was responsible for the I.R.A. constitution. He is responsible for the present attitude of I.R.A. prisoners towards enemy courts."

Nestor, having made a political statement and protested against "coercion," said: "But we won't be always in the 'Glasshouse.'"

Mr. Black said that, if there was anything to complain of in the "Glasshouse" or the Bridewell, as the prisoners had said, there was no reason why the proper authorities could not put it right, if the prisoners made representations to them.

All four prisoners were convicted of the charges against them, and also of contempt of Court, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment each.

SIX OTHER CASES

John Nalty, East Wall road;
William Scott, New road, Inchicore;
Leo Burdock, Marrowbone lane;
Michael Price, St. Michael's road;
Michael Kelly, Eccles street;
Joseph Hendley, Fitzgerald street, Harold's Cross.

The prisoners had all been indicted for membership of an unlawful association and (except Michael Price) with refusal to answer police questions. "Not guilty" pleas had been entered in each instance at the President's direction.

Mr. W. Black, K.C., prosecuted for the Attorney-General (instructed by Mr. John S. O'Connor).

The State evidence having concluded, the Tribunal found Michael Price not guilty of the charge against him, and ordered his release. They also found Scott and Kelly not guilty of membership of an unlawful association.

Michael Price before leaving the dock, said he wished to protest very emphatically against the conditions which made it impossible for the prisoners at the "Glasshouse" to attend Mass on the previous day.

The President—We are not concerned with that here. We have ordered your release, and you can make any protest you like outside.

Price—I wanted to put my protest on record.

The remaining prisoners were invited to make their defence.

GOVERNMENT OF WORKERS

Nalty said he was not an I.R.A. man, but he wanted to see a Government of workers and small farmers who would control the means of production and distribution for themselves, and not for the minority as at present.

Scott, Burdock, and Hendley all spoke of "coercion and tyranny by the C.I.D."; said the charges were "framed up"; alleged ill-treatment at the Bridewell; complained about the conditions at the "Glasshouse"; and protested at not being allowed to attend Mass there.

Scott said he was not a member of the I.R.A.

The President asked Scott, Nalty, and Kelly individually: If you had known it was an offence not to answer, would you have answered the police questions?

Each prisoner replied negatively; Scott and Nalty said they would not answer, because of the circumstances of the arrest, detention, and interrogation.

Nalty was found guilty of refusal to answer questions, and was sentenced to one months' imprisonment, to date from the day of his arrest, which meant that he was at once released. He was found not guilty of belonging to an unlawful association.

Scott was found guilty of refusing to answer the questions, and was similarly sentenced and released.

Burdock was found guilty of refusal to answer questions and belonging to an illegal association. He was sent to jail for six months on the latter charge.

Kelly was sentenced to one month, dating from the day of arrest (meaning immediate release), for refusing to answer questions.

Hendley was convicted of refusal to answer questions, and of belonging to an illegal association; he was sent to jail for six months.

Asked about the prisoner's characters (before sentence was fixed) Mr. Black said: I think all the prisoners are very respectable men, apart from these offences. I am only sorry they had to be prosecuted at all.

Admiral Grayson, who has been personal physician to three Presidents of the United States—Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson—was elected Chairman of the International League of the Red Cross in Paris yesterday.

TRANSPORT IN THE FREE STATE

AMENDMENTS IN NEW BILL

STRENGTHENING THE ACT OF 1933

By Our Political Correspondent.

THE Road Transport Bill, which was introduced in the Dail by Mr. Sean Lemass, Minister for Industry and Commerce on April 11, has now been circulated. It is intended to rectify certain weaknesses in the Act of 1933, which was already amended by an Act passed last year.

CARRIAGE FOR REWARD

With regard to the carriage of goods for reward, the new bill provides that where a mechanically propelled vehicle owned by an individual or a company is used for the carriage of merchandise the property of such individual or company such merchandise shall be deemed, for the purposes of the principal Act, not to be carried for reward.

Where the standard lorry weight for a licensee under a merchandise (existing carrier's) licence is less than two tons, the standard lorry weight for the purposes of the principal Act shall be increased to two tons, and the necessary amendment of the licence shall be made on application to the Minister. Certain adjustments may also be made in favour of the licensee where the standard lorry weight has been increased by a body manufactured in the Free State.

'CROSS-BORDER SECTION

A section dealing with restriction on importation of certain mechanically propelled vehicles used for carriage of passengers is apparently intended to facilitate the enforcement of the Transport Acts in connection with the North of Ireland firms doing business with the Free State. It does not, however, apply to anyone desiring to import a lorry for his own use.

A similar section applies to the importation of lorries or tractors used for the carriage of merchandise.

WOMEN WORKERS' CONVENTION

OPINION OF FINANCE DEPARTMENT

The annual convention and annual general meeting of the Irish Women Workers' Union will be held in Dublin to-morrow.

The annual report, which was issued yesterday, states:—"Your committee are driven to the conclusion that no more extravagant, time-wasting Board exists in this country than the Department of Finance. Comfortable wage increases might have been paid to the cleaners in the past year at the cost of the stationery, postage and clerical services, and committee meetings spent in negotiations between the Department and your Union."

There is an interesting paragraph in the report regarding the decision of last year's conference not to admit men to membership. It appears that when the men were transferred to another union catering for workers in the waterproof industry, the workers in this industry came to the conclusion that organisation in a solid block was necessary. The result was that the women followed the men, with the exception of those employed in one firm.

The report deals also with the possibilities of Government decisions which might force some hundreds of women out of industry. It states that any such move will be resisted vigorously.

Amongst the resolutions sent forward by the Executive Committee is the following:—"That this Convention protests against the growing tendency on the part of the Government and the trade union movement to restrict women's rights to work, and calls upon the Government and the Trade Union Congress to uphold the principle that industry shall be staffed by those best fitted for the jobs, whether men or women, and shall provide a wage scale based on equality rather than sex."

"AFTER CAREERS" FOR BLIND

INCREASE DURING PAST FIFTY YEARS

Evidence of a great advance in the education of the blind is given by a census of blind graduates that has just been completed by the National Institute for the Blind. The census deals with those who have graduated at universities in this country during the past fifty years (1884-1934). The data include the student's school, college, university, degree and class, year, and a brief summary of his or her "after career."

Analysis of the return, which deals with 146 blind persons, discloses the interesting fact that exactly half of them (73) graduated during the post-war period of 16 years, that less than one-fifth (28) graduated during the first 16 years of the period, and that less than one-third graduated during the middle period of 18 years. Considerably more than half (93) gained honours, the class results being 17 firsts, 52 seconds, 19 thirds, and five fourths.

"After careers" seem to show that the professions are becoming more and more accessible to the blind. There are records of 45 who took Holy Orders, 14 who became barristers or solicitors—in addition to six still serving their articles—and 19 who took up "school teaching." The miscellaneous remainder includes one farmer, six organists, two masseurs, two voluntary social workers, and three lecturers.

Only one of the 15 women graduates mentioned in the census appears to have married.

RECIPROCITY IN TRADING

IRISH BUSINESS WITH U.S.A.

VIEWS EXPRESSED AT DUBLIN MEETING

A meeting of the Council of the Federation of Saorstat Industries, Limited, was held on Friday last, at the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, the President, Mr. Joseph Milroy, in the chair.

An important discussion took place on the points raised in the Lord Mayor's address on the possibilities of inter-trading with the United States.

The President said that the Lord Mayor had succeeded in creating the feeling of optimism in the members. He had not touched upon his subject in the superficial way of a hasty tripper, but showed them he went armed with facts and figures, and that his judgment on trading possibilities had been formed on sound and thorough investigation. He had touched upon every feature that might suggest itself to a critical mind, and proved to their satisfaction that his deductions were based on sound reasoning.

The important points in his address might be enumerated as follows:—

(1) That the Free State had not received reciprocity in trading from the United States in the past.

(2) That there is a strong, active feeling existing in the United States to rectify the position.

(3) That with proper representations the tariff walls could be lowered to admit Free State products to the extent of her purchases from the United States, and that a dollar-for-dollar friendly agreement could be entered into for increased trade.

(4) There was an immense wave of sentiment for Free State products in the United States, and an intense enthusiasm to help us in building up our material progress that we could safely bank on.

(5) That an organisation could be formed in the United States, working in touch with organisations here, to promote the sale of Free State products.

(6) That the permanent officials of our Government are doing Trojan work in the United States, and could be relied upon to support our efforts for inter-trading.

PREFERENTIAL TREATMENT

The President continued that the address of the Lord Mayor was a complete justification of the policy of the Federation in pressing on the Government preferential treatment for 100 per cent. national firms, as it was only such firms with roots deeply emplanted in the country that were seriously interested in expansion by export trade. It must be clear to all that branches of foreign interests established here for the exploitation of our home market were little concerned with export trade.

It was depressing to find the immense penetration of non-national interests in spite of our efforts to prevent it, as also to find native capital flowing into industries sponsored by external interests. An address such as the Lord Mayor's clarified the position and pointed the way in which real prosperity lay.

Mr. J. J. Walsh said that they were indebted to the Lord Mayor for his sound practical address, and their committee on export trade must take up the matter at once and add to its number certain members of the Council who had experience in trade with the United States, such as Senator J. G. Douglas, F. H. O'Donnell, A. O'Shaugnessy and William Cronin. The financing of an organisation to deal with the sale of Free State products and the granting of credit to exporters was a matter for the Government, but it was the work of the committee to submit its scheme as early as possible.

HEAVY BURDENS

Mr. D. McCullagh fully supported the immediate operations of the committee in the examination of a practical scheme for inter-trading. He stressed the point that, while we are examining schemes for promoting the increased sale of our products, we must bear in mind the heavy burdens at present imposed on industry in rates, high wages and taxation, which are largely nullifying the benefit derived from tariffs.

It was unanimously agreed to make the matter of trade relations with the United States one of first importance in the work of the Council.

Regarding the immense increase in rates in the Rathdown district, Mr. J. J. Walsh proposed the following resolution, which was adopted unanimously:—

"That in view of the foreshadowed increase of 3s. 4d. in the £ on the rates of the area controlled by the Rathdown Union Committee, and the detrimental effect of so heavy a burden on the industries located in that area, as well as the wholly exceptional character of the increase itself, we, the Federation of Saorstat Industries, Limited, call upon the Minister for Local Government to institute an immediate and searching inquiry into the administration of the affairs of the Rathdown Union Committee, with a view to establishing justification, if any, for such added expenditure in this or any other area."

AVOCA SCHOOL HOCKEY DANCE

Avoca School Past and Present Hockey Club held a successful dance at the Cliff Castle Hotel, Dalkey, on last Saturday night.

Among those present were:—Mr. C. B. Parker (President), Mr. A. G. Gray (hon. secretary Dance Committee), Mr. E. Adamson, Mr. P. Prentice, Mr. H. D. Sarratt, Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Keegan, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Sarratt, Mr. G. V. S. Ireland, Mr. D. J. Coulson, Miss J. Hines, Mr. O. V. Mooney, Mr. J. K. Craig, Mr R. F. Browne, Miss S. Taylor, Miss F. Browne, Miss P. Browne, Mr. C. J. Little, Mr. and Mrs. S. Doyle, Mr. R. Power, Mr. T. Coulson and party, Miss V. Alexander, Mr. G. Martin, Mr. E. Colquhoun and party, Mr. W. K. Beckett, Mr. A. P. Huet, Miss B. Gordon, Mr. H. F. Sloan, Mr. E. Barry, Miss P. Hines, Mr. M. G. Hewson, Miss M. Leveroni, Mr. N. Stewart, Mr. R. Howe, Mr. S. Howe, Mr. A. Thompson, Miss M. Sargent, Mr. T. Dagg, Mr. S. Sutton and others.

PIGS AND BACON BILL

AMENDMENTS BY MR. BELTON

TWENTY-FIVE TO BE MOVED

MR. PATRICK BELTON, T.D., has put down twenty-five amendments to the Pigs and Bacon Bill. These will be taken on the report stage.

With regard to the Bacon Marketing Board, Mr. Belton will introduce a new section as follows:—

"(1) The Minister shall take immediate steps to have all pig producers registered and, from such registered pig producers, compile a panel to elect six members to the Board;

"(2) The Minister may ask existing organisations to nominate six persons to represent pig producers on the first Board or he may nominate six persons himself from among producers, but the Minister shall provide proper machinery for the election of all members to subsequent Boards."

NEW COMMITTEES

Mr. Belton will also move the following new section:—

"(1) The Minister shall cause two Committees of the Board to be set up and to be known as the Bacon Committee and Pigs Committee respectively, and constituted of the bacon curers', representatives and pig producers' representatives respectively, with the chairman and secretary of the Board as chairman and secretary of both Committees:

"(2) The functions of the Bacon Committee shall include the making of:

(a) An allocation (sales quota) order;
(b) A purchase order, and
(c) An order making regulations fixing the prescribed sum for the purposes of the provisions of this part of this Act relating to levy in respect of carcases used for the production bacon."

ISLE OF MAN CAR RACES

ONE ENTRY FROM IRELAND

From Our Motoring Correspondent.

There is one Irish entry for the Isle of Man Car Races, W. R. Baird, Belfast, who has competed in the Irish Motor Racing Club's Phœnix Park and Bray Races, as well as in the County Down Trophy and T.T., is to drive an M.G. Midget in the Mannin Beg Race, which takes place on 29th May. Baird incidentally is, I understand, one of those who have ordered new Monoposto Grand Prix M.G.'s (the new M.G. will be described and illustrated in the Irish Times motor notes next Monday).

Other entries for the Mannin Beg include three foreign cars—viz., two Bugatti's and a Maserati. The British opposition, however, is strong. F. W. Dixon, who won this race in 1933, and led for a greater part of the race in 1934, has again entered a Riley.

There are two E.R.A.'s, cars which have already demonstrated their remarkable speed; Mr. G. E. T. Eyston's team of three Magnettes, and Sir Herbert Austin's team of three Austins.

The M.G. cars, which have not yet made their appearance in racing, are the "mystery" cars of the race. The two Altas, entered by Mr. A. C. Lace, are also an unknown quantity and their appearance will be awaited with interest.

In the Mannin Moar Race, which is for cars over 1,500 c.c., the Bugatti entered by Earl Howe and Mr. Noel Rees is one of this year's Grand Prix type, and will be driven by the Hon. Brian Lewis, who has already twice won this race. Mr. A. H. L. Eccles's Bugatti is a similar car, and these two and Mr. R. O. Shuttleworth's Alfa Romeo are all capable of speeds in excess of 140 m.p.h.

Mr. Rose Richards has not yet nominated his car, but it is expected to be an Italian product of the latest type. All of the cars entered are in the "two miles a minute" class, and, even if no further entries are received, this year's Mannin Moar should be an historic race.

THE REARING OF RATS

THE WORLD'S STRANGEST FARM

Seven hundred thousand acres are being set aside in Canada for the rearing of rats. But the rodents are not of the same species as our own.

Muskrats contribute over £300,000 to the Dominion fur industry every year. The region now being explored by the Manitoba Provincial authorities, with a view to its possibilities as a muskrat ranch, covers the vast Delta of the Saskatchewan River. Formerly an important muskrat trapping area, the region was for a time denuded.

In the past few years, however, there has been a revival, one rancher, who leased 54,000 acres three years ago, trapping twelve thousand muskrats last season. It is estimated that, under proper protection and with a growing understanding of scientific conservation methods, the area is capable of producing at least 150,000 muskrat pelts a year.

NEW INCUMBENT FOR TANEY

The Board of Nomination for the Parish of Taney met yesterday (Monday) at the Diocesan Offices, 43 Kildare street, Dublin, when the Rev. Adrian William Fielder Orr, B.A., Incumbent of the Parish of St. Catherine, was unanimously nominated to the vacant incumbency.

Developing The Tourist Industry

£3,000,000 A YEAR FOR FREE STATE

PLANS FOR TEN YEARS' PROGRAMME

THE campaign to induce people to spend their holidays in Ireland opens to-day, when the annual general meeting of the Irish Tourist Association will be held in the Gresham Hotel, Dublin. This year the Association celebrates the conclusion of ten years' effort to promote the tourist traffic, and to familiarise the people of Ireland with the scenery and attractiveness of their own country. This work has been accomplished by means of an efficient system of advertising and propaganda through the Press and wireless.

The Association also has done much to encourage hotels and transport companies to attend to the comforts of holiday-makers, so that they might be encouraged to continue their patronage of Irish seaside resorts. In this connection a meeting of hotel proprietors will be part of to-day's proceedings. At this meeting which will be held at 3 p.m. the position of hotels in relation to taxation and other charges, will be reviewed specially, while schemes for the expansion of the industry, and the provision of suitable staff training and trade loan facilities will be discussed. The meeting will be attended by the owners of the principal hotels in the Free State.

IMPROVING OUR HOTELS

This is the time more than any other throughout the year when the hotel and restaurant keepers of the country—particularly in the provinces—should be taking all the necessary steps to secure that their establishments are properly equipped to meet the requirements of that increasing army of visitors which is expected to come to the country this year. The "go-ahead" hotel or restaurant keeper will not be waiting until the needs of some visitor draws attention to shortcomings. He should be familiar with the many and varied devices and methods for improving his hotel, and it would appear that the conference which opens to-day affords a splendid opportunity to all visiting hotel proprietors while they are in the city to make themselves familiar with the newest and latest methods.

These visitors should make it their business to call at the different places in the city which cater for their trade, and see at first hand what new gadgets and so forth have been introduced.

We all know that many a hotel situated in a lovely beauty spot would be greatly improved and brightened up by the introduction of fresh air. Many old hotels are, frankly, "stuffy." Yet with the introduction of an air conditioning plant there would be no difficulty in providing the hotel and restaurant with a plentiful supply of fresh air. Another improvement that would add enormously to the comfort of visitors in country hotels would be the provision of hot and cold water supplies in every bedroom. When so many private homes have this supply laid on, it is something of a nuisance for the dusty visitor to have to start messing about in his bedroom with the old-fashioned ewer and basin whenever he wants a wash and brush-up.

Tourist hotels, both in the cities and in the outlying parts, could do much in this direction. These establishments hope to attract foreign visitors, particularly Americans, and the latter, who are used to all sorts of modern conveniences in their globe-trotting, expect to find the same here. Far too often they have to get along after the style of the old Victorians. In connection with the provision of hot and cold water in bedrooms, there should be a plentiful supply of bathrooms. If not aiming at the provision of a bathroom with every bedroom, there should be at least a bathroom on every floor.

IRISH DISHES

Then there is the important matter of cooking and the fare supplied to foreign visitors. In many centres there is a tendency to adopt an imitation French style of cooking and menu, and as often as not the attempt fails. When these visitors come to Ireland they want to sample Irish fare, and, instead of playing about with menus à la France or elsewhere, the hotel keepers and their cooks should concentrate on serving the food products of the country in their most attractive and edible kind. Let these visitors, whether English or American, sample Irish beef and mutton, bacon, poultry and the rest in our Irish hotels, and not be placed in a position to say that they had to get home to England to taste these foods. Let the hotels concentrate on giving these guests good Irish cooking of Irish products, and so meet their average wants.

On this matter of the kitchen the hotel proprietors who are in Dublin for to-day's conference should take opportunity to visit the headquarters of the Electricity Supply Board or other electrical supply stores, or the premises of the Gas Company in the city, and inspect the plant designed for use in the kitchen. The go-ahead proprietor will see for himself the benefits that must be derived from the introduction of such plant in his hotel. From the point of view of economy they will more than pay for themselves in one season, and they must make for greater efficiency in the kitchen and a corresponding improvement at the table. In this connection, where perishable commodities are so much in use a refrigerator would appear to be almost an essential of every hotel, and will enable the concern to serve up in proper style those cold viands which the holiday-maker so much loves during the summer months.

GARAGE ACCOMMODATION

But one could go on pointing out all sorts of improvements that might be effected. There should be no need to do so; they should be apparent to the up-to-date hotel proprietor.

One point that most of these hotel owners are alive to is the provision of garage accommodation for motor cars. The decision as to what hotel the roadfarer will put up at often turns on the question of where he will find the best accommodation for his car. And, talking of motorists, it would be quite a useful thing if there were displayed somewhere handy in a hotel a good road map of the surrounding district, with notes as to the points of outstanding interest. A small matter, perhaps, some will think this, but, again, one of the little things that impress a hotel and its service on the memories of visitors and attract them to come again. That is what the hotel proprietors must aim at—impressing their visitors in all sorts of ways, so that they will be sorry to leave and anxious to return.

This, being the tenth anniversary of its foundation, will provide a suitable opportunity for the review of the work accomplished by the I.T.A. since its inception. It will be pointed out that the composite industry, which includes all forms of recreation, has represented, during the past decade an expenditure throughout all parts of the State of not less than £30,000,000. About half this sum represented revenue which was brought from abroad. It is estimated that during last year alone £4,000,000 was spent on Irish holidays. These figures are explained by the fact that the total passenger traffic by sea from Great Britain in 1934 was shown by official statistics as 382,062, the highest in the last ten years. The proportion relating to the holiday months of June to September was 238,438.

In 1925 the Association was building on an impoverished hotel industry, with resources consisting for the most part of enthusiasm. The industry then was a luxury trade, a sideline of the more extensive and solid business of transport, catering and general trade promotion. To-day it is an important and integral part of all these, secondary to, and a valuable outlet for, our main comprehensive industry of agriculture.

"Difficulties notwithstanding," states the annual report of the Association, which will be submitted at to-day's meeting, "Ireland's holiday industry has made good, and has come to stay. It has withstood the worse depression of modern times, in which other, and apparently more fundamental, industries in all parts of the world have been badly shaken. It faces the future with a confidence and optimism which we know to be the envy of practically every other branch of industrial endeavour in this State."

TEN-YEAR PROGRAMME

The Association proposes to suggest the adoption of a ten-year programme in the industry, and the matter will be discussed at to-day's meeting. The idea of this is that progress for the development of the industry may be made along well-defined lines, with the elimination of all avoidable waste, duplication and inefficiency. The aim of that programme should be to multiply the value of the holiday industry—the only export industry that has practically escaped the inventors of quotas, special taxes and other similar restrictions. The programme would imply the expansion of existing activities, coincident with a scheme for the development of the industry generally. The Association does not suggest that the Government should assume all the responsibility, but merely that part of it which only a Government could discharge, and which, therefore, it was the duty of a Government to undertake. The Association will be satisfied if an inter-departmental committee were to consider the general suggestions involved and the more detailed proposals which the Association could put forward—viz., extension and improvement of long-term credits, resort development, co-ordination of transport, annual holidays for workers, publicity, and the organisation of local enterprise.

The programme for to-day's proceedings is as follows:—

Conference of hotel proprietors, 3 p.m.

Reception of delegates and visitors, 7 p.m.

FELL FROM 'PLANE

AIRCRAFTMAN KILLED

A few seconds after three 'planes of No. 26 Army Co-operation Squadron had taken off from Catterick Aerodrome, Yorkshire, yesterday, one appeared to swerve inwards and tilt, and the passenger, Leading Aircraftman Wilfred Willoughby Green, was thrown and killed.

The machine was about 150 feet high, and the pilot immediately descended and landed within forty yards of where Green had fallen. Green, who had been at Catterick for six months, was twenty-six, and leaves a wife and two children. They were on a week-end visit to relatives at Middlesbrough.

A new air line linking Holland, Scotland and Iceland will be opened shortly by the Dutch Air Lines, according to a statement by the company last night.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Hero Worship : Werburgh Street Theatre : The Reign of Terror : The Swiss Consulate : Newts

New Consulate Premises

I see that the Swiss Consulate have been able at last to secure possession of their new offices in Westmoreland street. The Consulate shield that decorates the outside of the building is a white cross on a red ground, and should prove an attractive landmark as one emerges from the bottle-necked opening of Grafton street into Westmoreland street, which, by the way, is surely a happy site for a Consul-General's office, situated, as it is, in the very centre of the city.

It seems surprising, in view of the fact that Switzerland has always been a market for our horses, that they were rather tardy in establishing a Consulate here. They, too, have much to offer us in the way of engineering machinery and milling plant. Mr. C. J. Benziger, the Swiss Consul-General, who is at present on holiday in Switzerland, is a member of the Benziger family of Einsiedeln, publishers of world repute. Before coming to Dublin Mr. Benziger was President of the Port of Danzig, and is a close personal friend of Mr. Seán Lester, the League's representative there. Prior to the Danzig appointment he was Chief of the Consular Service in Berne.

Newts

I understand that water-newts, or water-salamanders as they are sometimes called, are common in fresh-water pools all over the country, but it is not often that one can get a really good "close up" of these fascinating amphibians, who display an extraordinary share of caution and timidity towards members of the human race. It would appear that they are particularly sensitive to light and shade, much more than is the frog or tadpole, whose habits they follow so closely. Friends of mine who own a tiny cement-lined pool in their rock garden were considerably surprised the other day at the appearance of a newt swimming around in a patch of sunlight. For some time past this pool had constituted a happy hatching ground for numerous tadpoles, and the problem now arises as to how the newt came to be there. I believe that a popular theory exists that tadpoles sometimes turn into newts, but such a conjecture can hardly be treated seriously. Since the arrival of this particular newt the tadpoles have mysteriously disappeared.

Reign of Terror

Books about the Reign of Terror have multiplied in many languages during the last hundred years, and those who refer to them—or, at least, to the more authoritative of them—will be surprised that none of them give any idea of the numbers that perished during that tremendous upheaval. Carlyle's history, so picturesque and dramatic in its descriptiveness, no longer holds the field as reliable for its statements, and certainly not where he gives the number of those executed as being under two thousand. Later on he puts the total number of those who were sent to the guillotine, the noyades and the fusillades at over four thousand. When it is borne in mind that the guillotine was practically in operation for two years, becoming busier as the Revolution progressed, until it was in daily use, a single batch of victims sometimes numbering between sixty and seventy, it is clear that the number must have been more than "the Sage of Chelsea" estimates. The grim machine was active also in Nantes, Lyons and other places, and when Carlyle writes of "children and women fusilladed by the one hundred and twenty, and by the five hundred, so hot is La Vendee," and of "guillotining at Nantes till the headsman sank worn out," his language implies that the holocaust must have been greater than he says. To the Jacobins the activity of the axe was an index of the strength of the Republican pulse. Sir Archibald Alison's "History of Europe," published a few years earlier than Carlyle's work, states that, according to a bulletin of the revolutionary tribunal, eighteen thousand persons perished by the guillotine at Nantes alone.

Real Hero Worship

It would appear that male film "stars" have taken the place in popular regard at one time held by the ladies. The regard still cherished for Rudolph Valentino is well known; but it would seem that even he has been beaten in "fan" worship by Richard Powell and "Buck" Jones. In London there is a "Dick" Powell Club, with its own clubhouse and with forty-three affiliated clubs in other parts of the world, from Hollywood back to China and from Scotland to South Africa. But even this is beaten by the "Buck" Jones organisation, which can boast a membership in the United States alone of about three millions; all boys ranging in age from 8 to 18 years. This club has its own band, which wears a smart blue uniform; and the great cowboy "star" himself is personally interested in its activities. Evidently this peculiar form of hero-worship has not extended itself to Ireland: or if it has its devotees remain extraordinarily silent and inconspicuous. There are in Ireland other interests to absorb the attention of youths and young men, and home-made heroes to be worshipped. And the young women seem to be of the same tastes as the young men.

Early Drama

The stage revival in London of "The Alchymist" comes just three hundred years after that comedy, by Ben. Jonson, was performed first in Dublin, at the old Werburgh Street Theatre, when the author still was writing; people then living had met Shakespeare and Beaumont and Fletcher, and Dryden was a child. The creative genius of the Elizabethan school of dramatists raised the stage in the English capital to a high level of popularity, and, when licences were granted for the production of plays throughout the Kingdom, the fashion for play-going spread to Dublin, where, says the great Wilks, Shakespeare's writings were held in as high a degree of estimation as in London. Performances here first were presented at Dublin Castle and in the mansions of the nobility, and it was not until 1635 that James Ogilby, who held an office under Lord-Deputy the Earl of Strafford, and was appointed Deputy Master of the Revels, opened in Werburgh street the first public theatre outside London. Ogilby's theatre had a pit and a gallery, but no boxes, except that which was reserved for the patron; and from that sparse description I assume that Ogilby constructed and conducted the house in accordance with his experience of London theatres, where, Samuel Pepys records, the charges for admission were two shillings and sixpence to the pit, and eighteenpence or a shilling to the gallery.

Werburgh Street Theatre

A member of the Old Dublin Society tells me that Ogilby's Theatre was rated in the name of a Mr. Perry, and that somewhere there may be an old lease which would prove exactly its site, which, according to S. C. Hughes (in his "Pre-Victorian Drama in Dublin"), is somewhere between Hoey's court and Ship street: alternatively, L. R. Strangways shows it (on his composite map of Old Dublin) directly opposite to Hoey's court; and the cartographer, enjoying, as he did, the collaboration of E. MacDowel Cosgrave—a reliable authority—is the more likely to be accurate. Ogilby himself managed the theatre during its opening year; then he was joined by his friend, Thomas Shirley, poet and dramatist, who shouldered the responsibility during four years. Of the members of that first Dublin stock-company I have traced only three—William Cooke, a resident of Wood quay; Alexander Cooke, who played here in Jonson's comedy, "Valpone"; and John Cook, author of "Tu Quoque"—also played here—a comedy which, thirty years afterwards in London, was worthy of a second visit by Pepys: "Went all to see 'Tu Quoque' again, where there was a pretty store of company . . . ."

A Literal Account

The following incident is said to have occurred at a railway station in the midlands not long ago. The stationmaster had just flagged out the local 3.15 sharp to the minute when he heard a sudden crash behind him and turned to see what had happened. The figure of a corpulent cattle drover lay, winded and inarticulate, in the midst of a cluster of overturned milk cans and wheelbarrows, while a solitary small boy looked on with excited curiosity. "Was he trying to catch the train?" inquired the stationmaster. "Faith an' he did catch it all right," retorted the small boy, "but sure it got away again on him."

QUIDNUNC.

LESS MEAT AND MORE VEGETABLES

LECTURE AT DUBLIN ROTARY CLUB

WITH a desire to see better health for everybody, Mr. H. F. Kamp, a South African diet specialist, who is now studying at the Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland, delivered a striking address before the Dublin Rotary Club, in the Metropole Restaurant, yesterday.

The people, he said, eat far too much meat, though not as much as in England; they also eat too much white bread and other white flour products, confections, etc., and consume too much strong tea. Wrong food, by adding to the harmful acids and toxins already in the body, was the cause of rheumatism, gout, neuritis and arthritis.

Contrary to general opinion, the physical labourer requires only ten per cent. more protein food (meat, fish, cheese, etc.) than the average person. This means that without any other food containing protein (of which most foods contain a great deal) half a pound of meat will supply all his needs. The working man who eats meat two or three times a day, besides many other foods that contain protein, is overburdening his system and eliminating organs with a quantity of material that is expensive to buy and is of no use to him. The use of meat need not be dispensed with altogether, but the quantity should in most cases be cut down. Whole meal and milk will supply all the necessary protein at one-third the cost of meat.

BROWN BREAD

Whole wheat products, said Mr. Kamp, should replace the greater part of the white flour products not only for an additional supply of food constituents, but also to furnish the necessary bulk for the proper functioning of the large intestine. In this connection, he said, you can grow more wheat, and you will use three times the quantity if it is made up in its natural form.

Vegetables and fruit should be consumed, both raw and cooked, in much larger quantities than at present. In this respect the Free State lags behind. Nearly every variety of vegetables can be grown here with success. Produced in large quantities, these could be sold at a price which would leave the producer a satisfactory profit, and would enable everyone to consume three times the quantity of vegetables used at present. An interesting point in this connection is the fact that a piece of ground large enough to raise food for one person in the form of meat would supply enough food for fifteen people for the same period of time if used for the cultivation of crops.

Dr. Bell, in proposing a vote of thanks, agreed with the lecturer as to the importance of diet.

Mr. Charles Jacob, seconding, also thought that people would do better by eating less meat, eating more slowly, and by using more milk for children.

Mr. Keith F. Eason presided, and the guests included the Rev. W. W. Hutchinson, Sutton, Co. Dublin, and Rotarian W. Butler, Skegness.

PILGRIMAGE TO LOURDES

BIGGEST IRISH CONTINGENT

What promises to be the greatest Irish pilgrimage that has yet taken place to Lourdes will leave Dublin next September by the Cunard-White Star liner Laurentic.

As 2,100 people already have booked for this year's pilgrimage, the Laurentic will be obliged to make two voyages to Le Verdon—the new port of Bordeaux—whence the pilgrims will proceed overland to Lourdes.

The sailings will take place on September 7 and September 11, respectively, and both pilgrim parties will enjoy exactly the same privileges.

Last year 1,300 pilgrims travelled from Dublin to Lourdes by the same liner, and were well satisfied with the arrangements made by the Irish Franciscan Fathers, who organised the pilgrimage, and by the shipping company.

Masses will be celebrated daily on the Laurentic, and the Eucharistic Holy Hour, with Solemn Benediction, will be held each evening.

Five complete days will be spent at Lourdes.

For the benefit of travellers who wish to visit places of interest in the vicinity, ample facilities will be provided.

Full particulars appeared in our advertising columns last Saturday, and can also be obtained at every Franciscan Friary in Ireland.

FILM NOTES

"Lives of a Bengal Lancer"

Children's Matinees : News-Reel Developments : Indicting the Powers

FROM A SPECIAL FILM CORRESPONDENT.

LAST week I mentioned the importance of films for children, and on the same day when the notes appeared the Lord Mayor of Dublin made an important speech on the subject to the Irish National Teachers' Organisation. Later in the week the teachers expressed their approval with the Lord Mayor's view by means of a resolution. At the same time the Savoy Cinema decided to revive the idea, used during the last Christmas season, of children's matinées, and every afternoon until Thursday next special performances of "Treasure Island" are being given in a programme made up with Silly Symphonies. The ordinary programme at this cinema starts at 4 o'clock.

Whether or not the management will continue this system remains to be seen. One of the important questions, from the film renters' point of view is: Do these matinées pay? The answer is doubtful, but the principle of special performances for the children should not be abandoned hastily. In London and other English cities films of interest to children are often shown on a Saturday morning, and the idea seems to be worth trying out in Ireland.

News-reel Comments

Anyone who goes to the cinema fairly frequently soon becomes familiar with the voices of the various commentators on the news-reels, and, to give personality to these voices, the Irish Movietone News now gives captions to every section of its reels, with the name of the commentator. I am afraid that I did not recognise the names as those of anyone who was a recognised authority on the subject on which he was commenting, but that matters little if the commentator knows what he is talking about. The Plaza fire of last week, naturally, appears in the latest news-reels, and some good shots were obtained by the camera-men.

Dublin is fortunate this week in having four very good films at its leading cinemas.

An Outstanding Film

The outstanding picture, which will probably be recognised as one of the best films of the year, is "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," at the Capitol. It is one of the finest productions ever turned out by the Paramount Studios, and should not be missed by anyone. The film, suggested by Major Yeats-Brown's book, bears very little resemblance to the original story; if anything, it is better, and runs for about one hundred minutes without introducing any sex interest at all. Surely some other film companies might take a lead from this? Colonel Stone, played by Sir Guy Standing, is a fine character, devoting himself to the Army alone and commanding that colourful regiment, the 41st Bengal Lancers. His son (Richard Cromwell), fresh from Sandhurst, and Lieutenant Forsythe (Franchot Tone) are sent to the regiment as replacements, and spend most of their time in company with Lieutenant McGregor (Gary Cooper), who has disobeyed the orders of the Colonel on more than one occasion.

Kathleen Burke, spying for Mohammed Khan, lures Lieutenant Stone away from camp, and he is taken to the hill fort of Khan. Forsythe and McGregor promptly disobey orders to go after him and become his fellow-prisoners. A consignment of munitions is captured by Khan and taken to the fort, through young Stone's "blabbing" under torture. But he behaves with courage during the attack by the Lancers on the fort, in which McGregor is killed blowing up the ammunition dump, and everyone is quite cheered up and has forgotten his lapse from grace by the time his father pins the D.S.O. on his breast at headquarters after the fighting is over.

BENGAL LANCERS: GARY COOPER AND RICHARD CROMWELL IN "THE LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER," AT THE CAPITOL.

Four Years to Make

The film took four years to produce, but it was worth all the trouble. The acting is particularly good, and the camera work (by Charles Lang) has produced some remarkable effects, particularly in the battle scene. For Irish consumption, however, Rupert Brooke's poem, "England, My England," recited with rather too much solemnity during the confinement of the three officers in Khan's fort, has been cut out. And, as the film closes, Colonel Stone pins the Victoria Cross on the saddle-cloth of Lieutenant McGregor's horse while the band plays—not "God Save the King" as in the original version of the film, but "Land of Hope and Glory." Neither of these changes mean much to the film; but they seem to indicate that film renters still remember the incidents which attended the showing of the Princess Marina Wedding film in Dublin.

A Young Actor

Franchot Tone, the young actor who plays the part of Lieutenant Forsythe in the Capitol film, also stars, with Madeleine Carroll, in "The World Moves On" at the Metropole. This is the story of a cotton firm in America, England, Germany and France, spread over a century, and associating two families, the Girards and Warburtons, with the motto of "Put the family first." Franchot Tone, as Richard Girard, gives a fine performance, and the story, by Reginald Berkeley, is unusual. Right down through the War, which, naturally, places some of the family with the Allies and others with the enemy, it provides some good examples of both photography and human nature. Reginald Denny is Erik, a German member of the family, and, the film having been founded in New Orleans, Stepin Fetchit is also introduced. He is, undoubtedly, amusing; but I often wonder how many members of film audiences understand all that he says. I do not.

Towards the close of the film, after the Wall street crash, the ideals of some of the family begin to crumble. They talk of the family as a washed-out idea, of war and so on, until the Padré reminds them that the family is still the basis of civilisation. Then some news-reel strips from all over the world, showing the marching armies of to-day, are introduced to indict the Powers for their martial policy, and just about this point the film, which is rather long, becomes a little banal. Nevertheless, it is an important production, and worth seeing.

The Race Track

"Strictly Confidential," at the Savoy, is the story of a one-horse-owner, Warner Baxter, who revolts against being manager of one of his wife's father's factories, and sets out to make his fortune on the Turf. His sister-in-law (Myrna Loy) is another of the family revolutionaries, and joins him in the racing town, to complicate his problems. Baxter, however, eventually wins the race, and his horse drops dead after passing the post. His father-in-law arrives, and—the ending is not what you expect it to be, and this saves the day. The picture is quite good entertainment.

Still Showing

Grafton—For a really good laugh go and see Jack Hulbert and Anna Lee in "The Camels are Coming," which has been retained for a second week.

Grand Central—"The Man who Knew Too Much," now in its third week, with Leslie Banks, Edna Best, Nova Pilbean and Frank Vosper.

Pavilion—Musical Comedy, with Grace Moore and Tullio Carminati, "One Night of Love." Pleasant.

Sackville—Richard Arlen in "Cap'n Jericho." Changes on Thursday to "The Big Executive," with Ricardo Cortez and Elizabeth Young.

Corinthian—Plenty of thrills. Warner Baxter in "Hell in the Heavens."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

TRAIN SERVICES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Your correspondent, "Blackrock," in to-day's issue of the Irish Times very usefully draws attention to the need for better lunch hour train services on the Amiens street-Dalkey section of the G.S. Railways.

As he correctly states, the suburban train service on the D.S.E. section is on the whole excellent, but there is undoubtedly room for improvement.

Even before the tram strike there were many complaints as to inadequate luncheon hour services and the need for speeding-up between Blackrock and Dublin, especially between the hours of 1 and 2.30 p.m.

It should be possible and well worth while to fill up the existing gaps in what used to be an excellent quarter-hour service each way to and from Dalkey, and to give a better and faster service to Bray and Greystones by instituting a shuttle service, whether "rail-'bus" or otherwise, between Amiens street and the bay at Dun Laoghaire Station, or even to Blackrock, where there is a cross-over, and running all the Bray and some, at least, of the Dalkey trains non-stop between Westland Row and Blackrock in each direction.

Incidentally, your correspondent is not quite fair to the company in describing their third class-carriages on this line as among the worst in Europe, although there is certainly a rather undue proportion of antiquated six-wheeled stock, mainly old G.S. and W. Railway and D.S.E. coaches, which should be weeded out and new bogie suburban coaches provided as soon as finances permit.—Yours, etc.,

THE DUBLIN TRAM STRIKE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Desperate diseases require desperate remedies, and most assuredly the traffic conditions in the city can be described as desperate.

Taking this condition for granted, there remains one sure and certain remedy to end the imbroglio. Remove the directors of the Tramway Company and the trade union leaders concerned from the scene of operations. Confine them together in an isolated apartment, absolutely cut off from telephones and from all contact with the outside world, and give them three days to hammer out a settlement. There is an excellent precedent for this course; for in serious cases juries are cut off from the outside influences until a decision is reached on the evidence.

Failing an agreement then, let the Government suspend the activities of the directors and refuse the trade union leaders any rights to function. Place a Director of Transport in supreme control, notify the men to return to work, and issue a certified statement from a responsible firm of chartered accountants as to the real financial status of the Tramway Company Action, and immediate action, is essential.—Yours, etc.

"DO IT NOW."

AN IRISH REPUBLIC

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In your issue of the 25th inst. you were good enough to publish a letter I forwarded to you under the heading "A Republican Enquiry." I owe you an apology for the careless manner in which the letter had been sent out by me, and I take responsibility for the slight misunderstanding which occurred as a result. I had intended "When is a republican not a republican?" as the heading under which the letter should appear. As published it was the opening sentence for the first paragraph. You were put to the necessity of improvising a heading, and, quite reasonably, chose "A Republican Enquiry," since the enquiry might easily have come from any impatient republican. It is a small point, but it may possibly account for "An Irishman" in to-day's issue taking it for granted that I am a Republican.

I had hoped that my letter would elicit a reply, but one different from that provided by your correspondent, who is as much concerned with assumed short-comings in regard to the narrowness of my mind, the extent, or lack of extent, of my travels, and the purity of my blood as with the question of Commonwealth or Republic. I do not flatter myself, however, that these are matters of public interest.

For reasons given in my letter of 25th inst., I do not believe that the facts that British landing parties are on Free State soil, and that we cannot get an undertaking from the British Government not to take retaliatory action should we declare a Republic, furnish sufficient reason why Mr. de Valera should not declare a twenty-six county Republic. I find I cannot escape one or two conclusions: either he does not believe it would be good for the country or that there is some other reason hitherto undisclosed. Your correspondent has not enlightened me on the point.

I would remind "An Irishman" that Mr. de Valera has consistently claimed to have the majority of the Irish people behind him, and my letter was not concerned with the rights or wrongs of the situation as they are, but as they appear to be to Mr. de Valera, judging him by his utterances. I would also point out to your correspondent that I did not suggest that the League of Nations should sit in judgment on the tariffs imposed by one nation on another. I pointed out that, as a member of the League of Nations, Great Britain is pledged to arbitration, and that the Free State has repeatedly offered to accept arbitration, but refuses a Commonwealth tribunal. The declaration of a Republic would remove the Commonwealth tribunal deadlock and would open the way to an international tribunal. Mr. de Valera professes that, given an international tribunal, a favourable verdict must ensue. One would think he would strive towards that goal, not sheer away from it.

I am tempted to suggest that "An Irishman" should read my earlier letter again, and more carefully.—Yours, etc.,

SWEEPS AND CONCERTS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—We have read in your newspaper with interest that the Irish Hospitals' Trust, Ltd., intend erecting a large hall in which to hold the drawing for the sweepstakes.

For a long time Dublin has been in need of a concert hall worthy of the capital of an independent State, and it seems to us that this would be an ideal opportunity for the Hospitals' Trust to present Dublin with a hall not only for sweepstake draws, but also for concerts.—Yours, etc.,

TWENTY YEARS AGO

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Your leading article, "Twenty Years Ago," in last Friday's issue contained much that was interesting. Mr. John Redmond, speaking in the House of Commons on the 2nd November, 1915, spoke of the omission in Admiral de Robeck's dispatch of all mention of the Dublin and Munster Fusiliers. "The obstinate refusal to allow the Irish people to learn officially of the achievements of the Irish regiments, and the total absence of official recognition of their gallantry do more harm to recruiting in Ireland than anything you could conceive." After this Sir Ian Hamilton's admission, published on the 28th of March, 1916, "I have satisfied myself that full justice has not been done to certain individual units," neither deceived nor placated anyone. Hamilton mentioned, when it was too late the 6th Royal Irish Rifles, the 6th and 7th Royal Dublin Fusiliers and the 5th and 6th Royal Irish Fusiliers.

No self-respecting Irishman has anything but contempt for those who devised such a fatuous scheme as the Gallipoli landing, whatever he may think of the misguided enthusiasm of those who perished.—Yours, etc.,

FALLING AVERAGES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The speeches of Mr. McSweeney and Mr. McGarry at the Teachers' Congress, as reported in Thursday's newspapers, would seem to suggest that the Labour Party were unaware of the hardship inflicted on competent and efficient teachers by the operation of the rule relating to "falling averages," and that they were silent in regard to its effect on the morale of the teachers.

Such, however, is not the case. Speaking in the Dail on April 4th, Mr. Norton reminded the Minister for Education that—"Something almost akin to consternation is produced by the facility with which it is possible for teachers to lose their positions in schools in which the average attendance of children fell in two consecutive quarters below a certain figure. . . ." (Official Debates, Vol. 55, Col. 1964.)

I may be permitted to add that, in summing up the case against the operation of this objectionable regulation, Mr. Norton definitely suggested that the rule should be so altered as not to prejudice the position of the teacher unless the average attendance fell "below a certain figure for more than two consecutive quarters," or, in the alternative, that the average figure on which the teacher's retention depended should be reduced below the present minimum.

I am quite aware that the speakers concerned had no intention of minimising the efforts of the Labour Party in regard to this matter—and so far as I am aware no deputy of any other party referred to it—but, as they may have missed seeing a report of Mr. Norton's speech, I hope you will be good enough to permit me to bring it under their notice.—Yours, etc.,

AFTER FORTY-TWO YEARS

RETIREMENT OF LIMERICK DOCTOR

Dr. M. J. Nolan, J.P., Resident Medical Superintendent, Down Mental Hospital, is retiring from that position in his seventy-sixth year, after forty-two years' service.

A native of Limerick, Dr. Nolan qualified in medicine and surgery at the Royal College of Physicians and the Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland, in 1882. From 1883 to 1888 he was in general medical practice in Limerick; physician to Barrington's Hospital; physician to the Lying-in Hospital; civil surgeon to the garrison; physician to the Government Male Industrial School; acting medical attendant to the Post Office officials and the Royal Irish Constabulary, and for two years acting medical Superintendent of Limerick District Asylum.

From 1888 to 1893 he was deputy Resident Medical Superintendent of the Richmond Asylum, Dublin, and from 1893 to 1935 he was Resident Medical Superintendent of Down County Mental Hospital. For some years before 1922 he was consulting visitor in lunacy to the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and since then consulting visitor in lunacy to the Lord Chief Justice of Northern Ireland.

In 1924 he became President of the Royal Medico-Psychological Association, presiding at meetings of that body in London, Belfast, Edinburgh, Birmingham and Dublin. In 1931 he was made an Honorary Fellow of the Association. Under his régime, Down Mental Hospital has been completely reorganised, and from time to time enlarged.

A cordial tribute to Dr. Nolan was paid at the last meeting of the Committee of Management of the Down Mental Hospital.

RAGLAN PLAYERS

The fifth annual play by the Raglan Players will be produced on May 1st and 2nd in St. Stephen's Parochial Hall, Northumberland road, Dublin. This year the play is "Lord Babs," and it promises to be even more successful than that of last year. The proceeds will be divided between St. Bartholomew's and St. Stephen's Church charities.

Thomas Mainwaring (17), of O'Shea's Cottages, Cabintesly, was treated at Monkstown (Co. Dublin) Hospital yesterday, at about midday, for shock and facial injuries received in a fall from his bicycle near his home. He was brought to hospital by the Dun Laoghaire ambulance.

ON THE WIRELESS

Daily Programme Review

DUBLIN: Station Orchestra, with Chrissie Manning, 7.30.

NORTHERN IRELAND: Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, 9.

B.B.C. NATIONAL: "The Air-do-Wells," 8.

REGIONAL: "Oak Trees," play, by John C. Moore, 8.

MIDLAND: Organ and Choral Recital from Southwell Minster, 7.15.

COLOGNE: Symphony Concert, Tchaikowsky, 8.15.

VIENNA: Opera, "Aida" (Verdi), 8.45.

THE Irish Tourist Association after-dinner speeches will be relayed at 8.30 from the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, where the annual dinner takes place to-night. Mr. Edward Bohane, Director of the Royal Dublin Society, follows at 9 to give his second talk on the forthcoming Spring Show (Dublin, Athlone and Cork).

It is interesting to note that Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson are included in the programme of music by Bach and Mozart to be given by the Belfast Wireless Orchestra (conducted by E. Godfrey Brown), in which they will play music for two pianofortes. They are announced to play Bach's Concerto in C minor, No. 1, and Mozart's Concerto in E flat.

"The Fifth Form at St. Pontefracts," or "Little by Little," a burlesque by the Melluish Brothers, will be broadcast to listeners again. Many may remember hearing it about a year ago, when it was first produced. The scene is the end of term at St. Pontefracts. In addition to a cast of six characters, the Midland Wireless Singers and the B.B.C. Midland Orchestra also will be employed. Victor Hely-Hutchinson will conduct, and the production is by Martyn C. Webster (Midland, 9).

A much more sober play will be found in "Oak Trees," but possibly no less attractive, if taken from a different viewpoint. Those who wish to laugh should not tune in. The time is the present, being Ralph Grant's seventy-third birthday. The scenes are laid in the morning room at Grantleatham House and in the woodman's hut on the estate. "Oak Trees," which is being produced by Peter Cresswell, will be repeated in the National programme to-morrow night.

In the organ and choral recital to be relayed from Southwell Minster, the choir will sing "O Domine Deus," the prayer written by Mary Queen of Scots on the eve of her execution, in a musical setting by G. T. Francis, the Minster organist.

"SCHEMES OF A NOVEL KIND"

DEPARTMENTAL COMMITTEE'S PLANS

VIEWS AT DUBLIN COUNTY COUNCIL

THE restriction of the Dublin water supply was discussed at a meeting of the Dublin County Council last night, when a letter was received from the Inter-Departmental Committee on Public Works suggesting that the Council should submit works or schemes of a novel character not usually undertaken by Government Departments.

NECESSARY SCHEMES

The Chairman (Mr. P. Belton, T.D.) said that he did not see why they should look for schemes of a novel character when so many necessary schemes required to be undertaken. In the central areas of the city the water supply had to be cut off, so that those in the suburban districts were sinking holes in an effort to secure water.

Mr. J. Good said that he believed that the pipes supplying some of the areas in the city were old and corroded, and a lot of water was going to waste.

The Chairman said that if the Government helped in the construction of the new pipes from Poulaphouca a supply of water amounting to 20,000,000 gallons daily would be given to the city. The construction of the scheme would absorb unemployed people, and, if it would not be novel, it would be very useful. What the Inter-Departmental Committee wanted were wildcat schemes. They asked the Government to put their shoulder to the wheel and have the scheme carried through.

Mr. J. J. Clare—It is obvious that they will do so.

It subsequently was decided to refer the Committee's letter to a special meeting of the Council.

TOWN PLANNING

The Law Agent submitted a report in connection with the Town and Regional Planning Act, 1934. He stated that he had formed the view that before adopting a resolution for the making of a planning scheme, the Council ought to obtain expert advice as to the part of the county health district in respect of which the scheme should be brought into operation. It would be necessary for the purpose of the making of a scheme to have the assistance of a town-planning expert or of some person who could give the Council expert advice on the subject.

He suggested that there should be a preliminary survey before the statutory resolution was adopted. It would be advisable to confer with the expert, if appointed, and with the officers of the Council.

Mr. Good's notice of motion, he continued, which had come before the Council previously was confined to the part of the county health district comprised in North Dublin, and which was described as the "Dublin Coastal Area." It appeared to him (Law Agent) that any scheme to be adopted by the Council ought to embrace parts of the districts of Rathdown and South Dublin, and that the Council should consider the inclusion thereof in the proposed statutory resolution, which must be in the form prescribed by the Town and Regional Planning Regulations, 1934, and must define the area for which the Planning Scheme was to be made.

COMPLICATED MEASURE

Mr. J. Good said that he thought the Council should get together a group of experts, in order that the matter should be considered carefully. The map of the area would have to be furnished, and the resolution must be sent to the Press. Each member of the Council must be served with the Council's proposals, while the scheme must be adopted by the majority of the Council's members. He suggested that the different townland boundaries should be followed. The measure was a very complicated one, yet it was necessary, and should have been introduced ten years previously.

It was decided to ask the County Surveyor to submit proposals for a scheme, and the matter was postponed.

CLEAN MILK BILL

A letter was received from the Minister for Local Government and Public Health which stated that the Minister saw no useful purpose in receiving a deputation from the joint meeting of the Dublin Board of Health and Dublin County Council in regard to suggested amendments to the Clean Milk Bill.

EDUCATION LEVY IN THE NORTH

"AUTOCRATIC," SAYS M.P.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

OMAGH, Monday.

When, at Tyrone County Council, to-day, a resolution was received from Ballymena Ratepayers' Association protesting against the education levy and the general re-valuation, the chairman (Colonel Howard, J.P.) said that it was only derated portions that would have to bear the burden, which, after all, would not be too heavy.

Mr. Colhoun said that everyone in the county, whether rated or derated, agreed that 1s. levy for education was a heavy burden on the people. Business in towns and villages had depreciated, and in many cases the ratepayers were unable to pay the additional levy.

Mr. Gould disagreed with the chairman, who said that the Council had only to pay a percentage of the cost of education and that the Government would pay the rest. He (Mr. Gould) would like to know where the Government got the money, as he believed that the people had to pay all.

The Chairman said that the money came from Imperial taxation.

Mr. Rowley Elliott, M.P., proposed a resolution protesting against the method adopted by the Government in imposing an education levy as being an autocratic way of raising money and not in accordance with the constitutional way of carrying out local government administration. They urged on the Government the necessity of reducing this levy to an amount which would only require the ratepayers to contribute towards the levy the amount assessed by 1s. in the £ on the existing valuation, and, that when the new valuations come into operation in 1936 that the poundage rates for education be reduced accordingly.

Mr. H. K. McAleer, M.P., seconded the resolution, which was passed.

PRESENTATION TO THE REV. J. McGINLEY

In the Knox Memorial Hall, Monkstown, Co. Dublin, on Friday evening last, the Rev. J. B. S. McGinley, late curate assistant of the parish, was presented with an inscribed silver salver, together with a cheque, on his promotion to the incumbency of Monasteroris and Ballyburley. The Rev. Harold G. Forde, M.A., Rector; Mr. Arthur E. Snow, and Mr. Cecil R. Ridgeway, churchwardens, spoke in high terms of Mr. McGinley's services.

BROADCASTING IN FREE STATE

ARRIVAL OF NEW DIRECTOR

NEED OF IMPROVED PROGRAMMES

BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE Free State's new radio chief arrived in Dublin last night, and will begin his duties to-morrow. He is Dr. T. J. Kiernan, from the office of the High Commissioner in London. He takes over the work of Director of Broadcasting from a civil servant, who has been acting in that capacity for some time.

At the present time the number of wireless licence-holders in the twenty-six counties of the Free State is approximately the same, or rather less, than in the six counties of Northern Ireland. This means that Dr. Kiernan is faced with the problem of increasing the number of listeners, with a consequent improvement in revenue from receiving licences and import duty on radio sets and parts. How he plans to deal with the matter is still a secret, and before much progress is made it will be necessary to improve the programmes broadcast over the Dublin, Athlone, and Cork Stations.

Very few people ever listen in to these stations if their sets are sufficiently powerful to get any of the English or Continental broadcasts. The average cost of the Free State radio programmes is between £7 and £8 an hour, and little improvement in them can be expected until more money is provided for this purpose.

OBJECTIONS

Opinions differ about sponsored programmes, but those broadcast from Dublin are the only features in the programme that are really worth listening to. More money also will be required to be spent on the news service, which, at the present time, is anything but adequate. After all, one does not want to hear the news from the evening papers over again from the radio; or the full text of the Free State Government's "Quota Orders" and Information Bureau "denials." They do not mean anything to the average listener, but if they must be broadcast, why not present them as brief paragraphs without citing a whole lot of red tape?

The number of outside broadcasts from various centres in the Free State has been increased recently, but very little effort has been made to encourage the "average listener" to tune in to Dublin. Perhaps, Dr. Kiernan will tackle this side of the problem—he will need to if he wants to raise Irish broadcasting out of its present rut.

Asked by an Irish Times reporter if he had any plans for changing or improving Free State broadcasting programmes, Dr. Kiernan said: "It is, of course, impossible for me to make any comment at the moment. I start work on Wednesday, and it will be some time before I can make any statement. It would hardly be fair for me to say anything now before I know anything about the position."

He admitted that he knew there was a good deal of criticism of the present radio programmes, but again would offer no comment.

Dr. Kiernan added that he had often listened-in to the Athlone Station, but the reception in London was "pretty poor."

On arrival at Dun Laoghaire yesterday Dr. Kiernan was met by his brother, Mr. Michael Kiernan, solicitor, and proceeded to his mother's home in Rathmines.

FREE STATE "VETS"

OBJECTIONS IN COUNTY TYRONE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

OMAGH, Monday.

At Tyrone County Council yesterday a letter was read from the Minister of Agriculture informing the Council that the administration of the Bovine Tuberculosis Order had been taken over by the Minister as from 1st April, 1935.

Mr. J. J. Rea said that the Northern Government had appointed a number of veterinary surgeons who belonged to the Free State, and, in fact, some of them were employed in Government offices in the Free State, and he knew of one veterinary surgeon from Co. Monaghan being employed in Tyrone.

Mr. H. K. McAleer, M.P.—Are these gentlemen natives of Northern Ireland?

Mr. Rea—I don't know, but I say that a gentleman who is practising in the Government offices in Dublin should not be brought to Northern Ireland and people who are citizens of Northern Ireland overlooked.

The Chairman said that at a conference held in Belfast it was agreed that the appointments would be made from the veterinary surgeons practising in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Rea—The Government has not carried out that agreement, and we should make a strong recommendation to the Minister on the subject. Thirty-two appointments were to have been made, and for these there were 52 or 53 applicants from Northern Ireland—all men who were well qualified to do the work.

Mr. J. F. Gamble, M.P., said that he agreed with Mr. Rea, but added that he understood that some of the veterinary surgeons who were appointed were not willing to leave the districts in which they were practising.

Mr. Rowley Elliott, M.P., said that these appointments should be given to men from Northern Ireland, and the Council should make a strong recommendation to that effect. When they had men in Northern Ireland qualified they should not go outside.

It was unanimously decided to make a strong recommendation to the Minister to appoint veterinary surgeons who were resident and practising in Northern Ireland.

MOTOR CYCLIST KILLED

COLLISION WITH LORRY

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

NEWRY, Monday.

Mr. R. H. Heron, Coroner for South Down, held an inquest at Rathfriland to-day touching the death of John McGivern (26), of Main street, Rathfriland, who died on Saturday evening after the motor cycle he was riding was involved in a collision with a motor lorry.

Brigid McGivern, a sister of the deceased man, said that he got the motor cycle about a week earlier, and this was the second time he was on it.

Rita Monaghan said that the deceased man was on the left-hand side coming round the Chapel corner and about to turn into Newry street, when the lorry came along and took rider and bicycle with it. She heard no horn sounded.

Dr. Shannon, Rathfriland, said that death was caused by fracture of the base of the skull.

The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical evidence.

There will be "no unemployment" in Germany by the end of this year, says Dr. Robert Ley, leader of the Labour Front, in a manifesto to workmen and employers, in which he thanks them for their "confidence" in the Government as expressed by the result of the recent labour trustee elections.

THE DUBLIN THEATRES

NEW PLAY AT THE ABBEY

"THE KING OF SPAIN'S DAUGHTER"

Peter Kinsella	John Stephenson
Jim Harris	Cyril Cusack
Mrs. Marks	Ann Clery
Annie Kinsella	Ria Mooney
Roddy Mann	J. Winter

IT might have been expected that a new play by Miss Teresa Deevy would have drawn a much larger audience to the Abbey Theatre last night, when her new play, "The King of Spain's Daughter," was staged for the first time. Known already as the author of a couple of unusually interesting plays, it was certain that good entertainment would be forthcoming, even in a short one-actor.

In the event the entertainment was excellent. The little play itself, without being in any way pretentious, is original in its approach to what might be thought an outworn subject, and the acting was in every respect satisfying.

"The King of Spain's Daughter" is Miss Teresa Deevy's latest contribution to the eternal discussion of "the dream and the reality." Dominated by a tyrannous father (splendidly played by John Stephenson), Annie Kinsella finds her way of escape through her dreams. Those dreams are focussed for her by a magnificent wedding in her neighbourhood—a wedding with red carpets, painted barges, gorgeous dresses, and pompous ceremonial. But she never saw the real wedding: all that she saw was the dream of herself in a similar ceremonial. She was drawn sharply back to the realities by being late with her father's dinner. First beaten, she was then presented with the alternatives of marriage with Jim Harris or five years' indentured work in a local factory. She accepted marriage with Harris, after a wooing in which the thriftiness of that young man had been demonstrated in his note-book to the extent of twenty pounds, saved at the rate of two shillings every week for four years. Annie would philander and bestow her kisses lightly upon the loafer Roddy Mann, but marriage was a different affair. It meant to her "settling down," and the alternatives were five years in a factory with regular hours and hard work or a lifetime with Jim Harris! She could run away, of course; and finally she did. A man who could save two shillings every week for four years could be a jealous man—one who could cut a throat. That was the thought upon which she fled.

The main part of the action fell upon Miss Ria Mooney as Annie, and Mr. Cyril Cusack as Jim Harris, and both gave excellent interpretations. The rebellious dreaminess of Annie Kinsella gave Miss Ria Mooney very fine material and she made a memorable character of the girl. In the sensitive and acquisitive Jim Harris, Mr. Cyril Cusack found material almost ideally suited to his abilities with excellent results. The two smaller parts were capably filled by Miss Ann Clery and Mr. J. Winter.

"WRACK"

In "Wrack," Mr. Peadar O'Donnell's realistic play of the Donegal coast, Miss Ann Clery played the leading part, of Brigid Boyle, which she created originally. So good is she in this play that it is difficult to imagine anyone else in the part. "Wrack" has been revised extensively, but it still remains a novelist's rather than a dramatist's play. The opening is slow; yet, not a word would willingly be sacrificed. Every one of the characters, many of whom do not contribute directly to the climax of the play, is interesting, and an intimate feeling with the terrible life of the island is established. Hunger drives them all to the verge of desperation; yet, when the herring comes again they are eager for the struggle with the sea. They venture without taking sufficient notice of the portents of disaster, and disaster overtakes them. The actual storm scene might have been staged to better advantage if utter darkness had not blotted everything out completely, and the irony of the catch in face of the storm might be emphasised a little. But "Wrack" is a very fine play, and one that should attract more attention from audiences.

A large cast, which included Cyril Cusack, Aoife Taafe, Sheila Ward, Bel Johnston, Desmond Crean, Fred Johnston, Eric Gorman, J. Stephenson, J. Winter, Donal Cooper, and Michael Clarke, performed the play capably.

The incidental music by Dr. Larchet's orchestra added greatly to the general enjoyment.

OLYMPIA THEATRE

Arthur White, who presents himself in a revue entitled "Variety Fantaisie," has all the qualifications of a capable comedian, and in one scene, in which he delivers a telegram, he demonstrates how effective comedy can be without any questionable trimmings. He was a popular artist last night and had the support of Charlie Bex, Bert Bex, Teddy Hale, Tich Rolvad, and others. Iris Carr and Charlie Bex were acceptable vocalists, and the Capaldi Brothers effective piano-accordeon players. Charles Ancaster was an entertaining and clever juggler. There is a great deal of dancing in the revue, very adept exponents of the art being the Kirolla dancers, the Stanella Four, Grace Prowse, and George Heiniger and partner.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

"Girl in Danger" is the film at the Queen's Theatre this week, and in it Ralph Bellamy and Shirley Grey give fine performances in the principal parts. The stage attraction is a lively revue, entitled "Ain't She Sweet." In this Haig and Escoe, Susan and Pat, Milton Hunter and the Bros. Bare, create a great deal of fun. Some attractive dancing is done by the Moonbeam dancers, and Alex Fryer and his band play a number of attractive musical "hits."

TORCH THEATRE

The success of James Bridie's play, "The Anatomist," during last week at the Torch Theatre has led to its retention for the coming week. The play has a fine story behind it, and contains a number of tense scenes, from which the players get full value. The story of the play is concerned with the activities of two notorious body-snatchers and an eminent doctor, with whom they were believed to have had dealings. The scenery for the play has been specially constructed.

LORD HYDE'S TRAGIC DEATH

KING'S MESSAGE OF SYMPATHY

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

CAPE TOWN, Monday.

Lord and Lady Clarendon have received many messages expressing sympathy at the tragic death on Saturday of their son and heir, Lord Hyde. The King sent the following telegram:—"The Queen and I are shocked at this terrible accident to your son. We feel most deeply for you both and for poor Marion in your great sorrow. What a loss, indeed, he will be to you all."

NATIONAL ANTI-VIVISECTION SOCIETY

The annual public meeting of the Dublin Branch of the National Anti-Vivisection Society will be held at the Shelbourne Hotel on Thursday, May 2nd, at 4 p.m., as announced in our advertising columns. Mr. H. Bowker will deliver an address entitled "Recent Developments of Vivisection," in which he will deal with the proposal of the Hospital Sweepstakes Committee to include in the scheme of medical research submitted to the Minister for Public Health the establishment of a sera institute and of laboratories where animals will be subjected to painful experiments, against which the society is promoting a petition.

NEWRY LIBEL ACTION

TRAIN OUTRAGE RECALLED

VERDICT FOR THE DEFENDANT

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Monday.

THE derailing of a troop train at Adavoyle, Co. Armagh, on the Great Northern Railway in June, 1921, was mentioned in a libel action heard in the King's Bench, Belfast, to-day. The action was brought by William Paul, commercial traveller, formerly of Adavoyle, Co. Armagh, and now resident in Wales, who claimed damages for defamation of character from Garnet W. Holt, J.P., auctioneer, Water street, Newry.

Mr. E. S. Murphy, K.C., opening the case for the plaintiff, said the matters complained of were contained in a letter which connected the plaintiff with a dastardly outrage committed in June, 1921. The jury would remember that in 1921 H.M. the King opened the Northern Parliament, and on that occasion the regiment of the 10th Hussars were in Belfast acting as an escort for the King. After the ceremony the 10th Hussars entrained to go back to the Curragh. As that train was descending the slope on the Great Northern Railway running into Dundalk it was derailed, one of the rails having been removed from the permanent way. Two of the Hussars were killed and the guard of the train was killed, and many of the horses were killed and injured. The plaintiff was on his bicycle that morning, and the military and police compelled him and others to go and help to put the horses out of their pain and assist in repairing the damage done by the appalling outrage.

After working for two and a half hours he told the police he had an appointment, and he was allowed to leave the scene and keep the appointment. That was all the plaintiff's connection with a discreditable and detestable crime.

A LETTER

The circumstances leading up to the letter complained of were that the plaintiff's father, Robert Paul, by his will left seven small houses in Needham street, Newry, to the plaintiff. Civil bill proceedings arose over the payment of the head rent, and Mr. Paul told the defendant payment had been overlooked.

Then was written the letter complained of. It was addressed: "Mr. Paul, Adavoyle, Meigh, Newry," and contained the words:

"Evidently you (meaning the plaintiff) enjoy paying costs to solicitors. Sometimes I (meaning the defendant) think it was a pity I didn't leave you against the railway embankment when the 10th Hussars had you that day at Killeen. In these hard times, perhaps, you sometimes have the same thought."

Mr. Paul had nothing to do with the outrage. He was never put up against the embankment by the Hussars, and there was no necessity that he should be so placed.

The letter was delivered to James Paul, the plaintiff's father, to whom it came as a terrible shock. The letter had also been published to the person who typed it, as it was typewritten and other people saw it.

He asked the jury to give such substantial damages as would show to all the world that no man was entitled to make such outrageous charges and get off free.

Evidence was given by the plaintiff.

Mrs. Paul, wife of the plaintiff, proved she got the letter, and Mrs. James Paul said that her sister-in-law showed it to her.

At the close of plaintiff's case his Lordship acceded to an application by Mr. Lowry for a direction on the ground that there was no publication. His Lordship said there was no evidence of publication, and directed the jury to find for defendant.

Judgment was given accordingly, with costs.

VENICE TALKS

ITALY, AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY TO MEET

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ROME, Monday.

The Italian Government has officially informed the Governments of Great Britain, France and the Little Entente—Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia—that a meeting will be held at Venice on May 4th between representatives of Italy, Austria and Hungary.

This conference, which is being held to clear the ground for the larger Danubian conference at Rome at the beginning of June, is in accordance with the agreement reached between France and Italy in January.

At the Danubian conference the principal problem will be the safeguarding of Austria's political independence.

A NORTHERN ADDRESS

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Monday.

The following Jubilee Address is being sent to the King by the Ulster Women's Unionist Council:—

"We the members of the Ulster Women's Unionist Council beg leave to tender our humble duty and respectful congratulations to Your Majesty and Her Majesty the Queen upon the joyful occasion of the Silver Jubilee of your glorious reign, and earnestly pray that by Divine Grace Your Majesties may be long spared to enjoy the love and affection of a grateful people.

"We assure Your Majesties that throughout the wide domains of the British Empire there are not to be found more faithful and devoted subjects of the Crown than the members of this Association, representing, as it does, all classes of the loyal womanhood of Northern Ireland."

The address is signed by Lady Craigavon.

NORTHERN EMPLOYMENT

Statistics collected on the 15th April, 1935, indicate that the estimated number of persons aged 16-64 in employment insurable under the Unemployment Insurance Acts in Northern Ireland is about 950 more than a month ago, but 750 less than twelve months ago, the comparative figures being:—

23rd Apr., 1934	188,750
25th Mar., 1935	187,050
15th Apr., 1935	188,000

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA BILL

DEBATE ON AMENDMENTS

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Monday.

WHEN consideration of the Government of India Bill was resumed in the House of Commons to-day, there were twenty-eight pages of new clauses and amendments to the schedules still to be disposed of. With the Secretary of State for India absent, on account of indisposition, the conduct of the bill was left in the hands of the Under Secretary, Mr. Butler, and Ministers of other departments.

The Solicitor-General (Sir D. Somervall) moved a new clause, the purpose of which was to protect public servants in India against prosecutions, or suits, by providing that no bill or amendment to the Indian code of criminal or civil procedure should be introduced or moved without the sanction of the Governor-General or the Governor of a province.

Mr. H. G. Williams (Conservative) viewed the new clause with considerable misgiving. It was not right, in his opinion, that the introduction of legislation affecting the protection of civil servants should be dependent upon the discretion of the Governor-General or a provincial Governor. It was a matter which the House of Commons should not let out of its control.

After further discussion the Solicitor-General considered that the safeguards against frivolous prosecutions were amply sufficient. The Governor-General and the Governor had special responsibilities where the interests of public servants were concerned, and it would be their duty to see that they were fully protected.

The clause was carried by 188 to 36.

CORPORATION TAX

Mr. Davidson (the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster) moved a new clause to provide that corporation tax should not be levied in any Federated State until ten years had elapsed from the date of the establishment of the Federation, and that after that time any ruler of any Federated State might elect to pay an equivalent contribution to the revenues of the Federation instead of a corporation tax.

Lord Wolmer (C.) protested that there had never been such a proposal in any Constitution in the history of the world.

Mr. Wise (C.) said that the only effect of the clause would be to drive industry from British India into the native States.

The clause was agreed to.

ALLEGED MASS DEPORTATIONS

Mass deportations of Ingrian Finns to distant parts of Soviet Russia have begun again, according to reports published at Helsingfors. It is alleged by the Association of Finnish Students and Teachers that more than 2,000 families living near Leningrad had by April 10th received orders to be prepared for a long journey to an unknown destination, and that in week before Easter some 1,000 families had already been deported. The people in question, mostly small farmers and fishermen, and most of them supporters of the Ingrian Lutheran Church, are being sent to Turkestan and the Mongolian frontier of Siberia, it is alleged.

The story is briefly this: Robert Emmett, a young Dublin College socialite, has been caught up in a radical conspiracy against the British Government. He is engaged to Sarah Curran, the pretty vivacious daughter of John Philpot Curran, a well-known Dublin attorney. The conspiracy is discovered, Emmett is seized, arrested, tried and executed. The scene of the play is laid in O'Connell street, where the gallows have been erected for the execution. Sarah heavily veiled escorted by her faithful attendant Anne Devlin has pushed her way through the crowd. She has now managed to reach Robert.

Sarah: What is this? O Robert asthore what is it they've been doin' to ye and where do they be taken ye?

Robert: To my death, Sarah.

FINANCIAL

London Stock Markets opened the new account in uncertain fashion. Gilt-edged stocks declined. Some Industrials were strong.—(Page 12.)

Silver fell to 34 1-16d. per oz., and gold dropped to 144s. 5½d., at which price £329,000 in bar gold was sold.—(Page 12.)

Dublin Market was irregular, but adverse movements among local securities were small.—(Page 12.)

WEATHER FORECAST

General Inference.—An anti-cyclone centred off our south-west coasts and still covering the British Isles is drifting slowly southwards and decreasing in intensity, and a depression on the Atlantic is moving north-east. Weather will be fair in most districts, but drizzle may occur later in West Ireland and West Scotland.

North-West and South-West Ireland.—Freshening south or south-west wind; dull; some drizzle; rather mild.

North-East and South-East Ireland.—Light to moderate south-west wind; mainly cloudy; rather mild.

Irish Sea and St. George's Channel.—Light south-west wind; cloudy; local fog; sea slight.

NEWS SUMMARY

IRELAND

A conference of Irish exporters to the United States is to be called in order to devise means for improving the marketing of their goods in America.—(Page 7.)

It was announced at the meeting of the Dublin Branch of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution yesterday that there are now eighteen boats around the Free State coasts, and that they were instrumental in saving forty-five lives last year.—(Page 2.)

GREAT BRITAIN

In the House of Commons yesterday the Postmaster-General announced a number of concessions in the postal service to mark the Jubilee of the King.—(Page 7.)

ABROAD

In contrast to the categorical disclaimer made on Saturday by an official of the Reichswehr that submarines were being built by Germany, a Government spokesman in the Wilhelmstrasse last night had no comment to make on the announcement by Sir John Simon in the House of Commons yesterday that Germany had intimated—he thought it was on April 25th—that she had decided to build twelve 250-ton submarines.—(Page 7.)

SPORTING

At Derby yesterday Burman won the Derbyshire Handicap.—(Page 10.)

Posts and Telegraphs

One department, at least, of the British Government proposes to celebrate the King's Jubilee in an eminently practical manner. The Postmaster-General, Sir Kingsley Wood, acquainted the House of Commons yesterday with the tidings of substantial reductions which he intended to make, as a tribute to the occasion, in the various postal services. The charge for the conveyance of ordinary letters will not be cheapened—such a concession probably would mean a calamitous fall in revenue—but from June 15th onwards a postcard will be delivered from the United Kingdom to any part of the British Dominions and India for 1d., instead of the present 1½d. More useful, and, we presume, more costly, will be the reduction of parcel post and telegraph charges. The new rate for parcels will amount to 6d. for the first three pounds, 1d. for every additional pound up to nine pounds, and a flat rate of 1s. for parcels weighing between nine and fifteen pounds. Sir Kingsley Wood hopes that this concession will be helpful to industry and in particular, to agriculture; for the existing high charges on small parcels, he observes, have been a frequent source of complaint by farmers. In regard to the telegraph service—which, as he is careful to explain, is an unprofitable service—the cost will be lowered to 6d. for the first nine words and 1d. for every additional word. He proposes also to reduce the charge for radio-telephone message to India and the Dominions by one-half, and to drop the additional charge for calls between Northern Ireland and Great Britain. Finally, it is the Postmaster-General's ambition that by the end of next year no village in Great Britain or Northern Ireland shall be without its public telephone.

We do not dare to hope that Mr. Gerald Boland will follow Sir Kingsley Wood's good example. Any attempt to reduce Free State charges to the low British level would bring bankruptcy upon his department. Nevertheless, these British concessions reveal, in a stronger light than before, the extreme dearness of the Saorstát's services, and suggest that, even at the cost of a temporary loss in revenue, something might be done to make them more generally available. It is improbable that a change can be made in the postage fees for letters and postcards. A reduction from 2d. to 1½d. in the charge for letters, pleasant as it would be to the burdened taxpayer, and helpful as it certainly would be to business firms, hardly would result in a greatly increased use of the letter post, and so is unlikely to commend itself to the Department of Posts and Telegraphs. Much the same reasoning applies to the matter of telegrams. In England, as in the Free State, telegrams are a declining means of communication; the increasing use of the telephone has struck them a mortal blow. Even after the Free State charge for the first twelve words was raised from 1s. to 1s. 6d. revenue continued to decline, and it is questioned whether a reversion to the old scale would bring revenue back to anything like its old level. Sir Kingsley Wood admits frankly that he has little hope for the telegram. There has been a loss, he confesses, on the British telegraph service for many years, and his new reduction in the charges will increase the deficit for, at any rate, some further period. If Britain sees no future for the once invaluable telegram, it is hardly probable that its prospects will be any brighter in the Saorstát, or that Mr. Boland will consider a lowering of the charge even to the old rate.

On the other hand, there are several respects in which, as we think, the Department of Posts and Telegraphs could reduce its charges with the probability of financial benefit to itself and the certainty of convenience to the public. The cost of carriage of parcels is too dear, and will become a serious handicap as domestic industry increases. A cheapening of the parcel post almost inevitably would be followed by enlarged traffic. Furthermore, it is time that fresh thought should be applied to the question of the Saorstát's telephone service, which is good so far as it goes, but does not go nearly far enough. When Great Britain reduced her telephone charges the sequel was what Sir Kingsley Wood describes as an "unprecedented telephone development," which already is beginning to recoup the Post Office amply for its enterprise. Ours is a small country, wherein telephone communication could be developed to a high degree; but at present, largely through the high cost of rental and calls, private telephones are the exception rather than the rule, the great majority of the smaller business houses dispenses with them, and large areas are almost barren of instruments. We suggest that Mr. Boland's first reform should be to initiate a "use the telephone" campaign, and to stimulate it by a reduction in the charges. His next might be to imitate Sir Kingsley Wood's ambition, and to take steps that every village in the Saorstát shall have its public telephone before the end of 1936. There is no possible doubt about the increased revenue that would accrue to the Department, even if it should not appear for a season or two, and the public benefit would be enormous. Certainly the Exchequer would more than regain on the telephones what it is losing on the telegram service.

Beati Pacifici

The brilliance of the scene in which Archbishop Hinsley was enthroned at Westminster yesterday was a happy omen in a time of dark foreboding. All ranks and sections of the English people signified their good-will to the Roman Catholic Primate by messages of congratulation or by the silent tribute of benign interest. Times have changed, remarkably, indeed, since Dr. Wiseman took possession of his See in the last century, under the frown of the State, and with no welcome save by his own flock. A line of high-minded and sagacious prelates must be thanked for the happy transformation. Most of all, Cardinal Vaughan and the late Cardinal Bourne won this moral victory for their Church. These were great Englishmen, proud of their country's whole tradition, and so recognised by those who were opposed most sternly to them in theological principle. Thus, in the last half-century, the last traces of divided loyalty in England disappeared. In the Reformation years, and as late as the middle of the eighteenth century, when the Pope and the English Roman Catholic prelates recognised the House of Stuart as the legitimate dynasty, there was a difference of temporal allegiance between Protestants and subjects of the Roman Church. That ended when the legitimacy of the Revolutionary settlement was admitted by Rome, and the prescriptive authority of the new Royal house was acknowledged. Memory of the secular quarrel died hard. It underlay the resentment to the re-establishment of the Roman hierarchy in the last century, and lingers in such affairs as the late demonstration at Glasgow. There remains no excuse for dissension between the two great Christian religions in these islands, and the example of England surely ought to be followed in Ireland. Both can be loyal to the same temporal authorities, if legitimately constituted, and nothing but misery and scandal can result from the prolongation of a feud of olden days. The onslaught on the very basic principles of Christian faith, morality and order which we behold in Germany and Russia ought to persuade all Christian folk to compose their differences, or at least to practise to differ in charity. Archbishop Hinsley's message from the Pope was a prayer for peace. Justly and with hope may peace between nations be sought when peace among fellow-citizens is the beginning.

Trains in the Air

We are not cheered—in the ninth week of Dublin's transport stoppage—by the news that the Russians have invented a flying train. It seems that closed craft, linked together, are sent hurtling through the upper air, with some gigantic engine to maintain the impetus. Travellers who are not bound from terminus to terminus alight at their home town by parachute. When Citizen Popoff wishes to get off, it seems, he may hop off, and no obstacle is put in his way. We prefer Dublin's way, even without tramcars and omnibuses. It may be exhilarating to leap from the sky, in order to reach one's office by the roof and enter the boardroom like some deus ex machina; but a landing on the wrong roof would be embarrassing in a country which has not yet arrived at the communistic state. There can be no first, second and third class in the Bolshevist aerial train. All carriages are smoking carriages, and none will be reserved for "Men Only"—a refinement which harassed male travellers would welcome in our own country. Straphanging, no doubt, is compulsory as a mark of equality in discomfort. The vaunted mass mind of Russia, we suspect, will not tolerate much longer the aeroplane made for two or for family parties. Once aerial travel in bulk has been made possible, smaller parties will be regarded as inimical to the spirit of the revolution. Even the clouds are invaded by mass man; the heavens have been made safe for Communism. More than fashions of attire or even places of abode, modes of transport have been the chief mark of the classes in all ages. The equites, the gentlemen of Rome, took their title from their horses; so did the caballeros and cavaliers of Latin countries. In the last century the keeping of a gig was a sign of gentility, in the popular eye, and Thackeray coined the nice term "gigmanity" for a social rank. Some years ago car-owners and pedestrians were as clearly distinguished as patricians and plebs of old; but motor cars multiplied so rapidly in Mr. Henry Ford's factories that car-ownership ceased to be a claim to eminence. Horse-power and model afford some criteria still, but we have many citizens who display a fine, old-world pride as of Cato by reversing all the standards of the ages and travelling afoot.

Real Art

A rousing story is told of a certain night among the artists in Montparnasse. It may have been Montparnasse, or the Boulevard St. Michel, or the Rue Pigalle; but, at any rate, the scene of the tale is laid in the Gay City, where men wear their hair down to the shoulders, and women are equally careless. As the real artists chatted over their fines they decided that some use should be made of a donkey which they had close to hand. A little consideration gave them the inspiration they required. They fastened a brush to the tail of the donkey and reversed him up against a large, clean canvas. By devious methods they induced the animal to wag his tail, and over the large clean canvas there spread a complicated mess of loops, whorls, and worse. They signed the picture with a suitably illegible signature, and sold it for thousands of francs. This is as good an end to the story as any other. The point when excavated seems to be that one never can tell with these impressionist painters. The hand that rocks the donkey so often has a deceptively artistic touch that the art-lover never can tell if his pièce de résistance has been created by man or beast. It would be idle to pretend that donkeys do much painting; but, probably, if they did, their sales would run those of some modern artists pretty close. Modigliani can paint a woman with a two foot neck and it does not seem out of place. It gives even a more vivid representation of the sitter than would a photographic reproduction. When some of our more youthful geniuses, however, launch out into the troubled sea of two foot necks the result is merely ghastly. Few of them seem to be able to deny themselves one good and literal splash in the course of their artistic careers. Occasionally they discover something in themselves they never knew existed; sometimes they nearly get lynched. Thus a well-known artist presented St. Francis of Assisi to the Royal Academy in the shape of a captive balloon. Apparently, he thought it was pretty good; the Royal Academicians said they could not possibly hang a thing like that.

THE JUBILEE DAY PROCESSION

DETAILS OF CEREMONIAL

The official programme of the ceremonial at the Thanksgiving Service at St. Paul's Cathedral on May 6, Jubilee Day, was issued from Buckingham Palace yesterday. The Service begins at 11.30 a.m.

At 10.37 the Duke and Duchess of York, with the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret, and the Duke and Duchess of Kent leave Buckingham Palace for the Cathedral with a captain's escort of Royal Horse Guards.

The Queen of Norway, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Gloucester, the Princess Royal, the Earl of Harewood, and the Princess Victoria, escorted by Life Guards, will leave the Palace at 10.42.

The King and Queen, with a Sovereign's escort of Life Guards, drive from the Palace at 10.54. Their carriage procession will be preceded by regimental detachments.

At Temple Bar they will be received by the Lord Mayor, who will offer the city sword to His Majesty, and precede him to St. Paul's.

In the first carriage of the procession will be the King and Queen, and in the second Princess Arthur of Connaught, Princess Alice Countess of Athlone, Prince Arthur of Connaught, and the Earl of Athlone.

Four other carriages will follow with high Court officials.

Service at the Cathedral will be performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the Bishop of London, the Dean of St. Paul's, Canon Alexander, the Rev. M. F. Foxell, and the Rev. Dr. S. M. Berry.

At the conclusion of the Service the three carriage processions will return to the Palace in the reverse order to that followed for the drive to the Cathedral.

Guards of honour will be mounted at the Palace and the Cathedral, and trumpeters of the Life Guards outside the Cathedral will blow a fanfare on the arrival and departure of the King and Queen. Contingents from the Navy, Army and Air Force will line the route of the processions.

On their way to the Cathedral the three Royal processions will be preceded by the Prime Minister's procession, consisting of six carriages which leave the Mall with escorts of mounted police; the Lord Chancellor's procession of two carriages from the House of Lords, and the Speaker's State coach from the House of Commons.

QUENTIN ROOSEVELT

The "Quentin Roosevelt" left Dublin on Saturday for Glengariff, and thence to Scotland, Norway and Spitzberg.

The garde-pêche "Quentin Roosevelt" is one of the few warships in the French Navy which bear the name of a foreigner. France gave to it the name of the fourth son of Theodore Roosevelt—ex-President of the United States of America—and one of the four brothers who served in the American Army in France during the Great War.

Before the entry of the United States into the war, which took place on the 2nd April, 1917, Theodore Roosevelt had offered to recruit a division to come to France to defend the cause of liberty.

His son, Quentin, was one of the first volunteers to land on French soil. In August, 1917, he finished his training at the Aviation School at Issoudun; in June, 1918, he was sent to the front with an American squadron, and the following 14th July he died a hero's death in an aerial engagement, falling with his plane among the German lines near Chamery, north of the Marne.

His Chief, Colonel R. C. van Horn, recorded the services rendered by Quentin Roosevelt in the following terms:—

"Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt during his whole career in the Air Service, both as a cadet and a flying-man, was a model of the best type of young American manhood. He was most courteous in his conduct, clean in his private life, and devoted in his duty. As an officer he had the best interests of the service always at heart, performed his duty no matter what it was, whether agreeable or not, always to the best of his ability, and without question or remark.

"After completion of his training as a pilot, he was selected on account of his efficiency as an instructor, and had charge of one of the most important flying instruction fields. His great desire and hope was to be allowed to get to the front. This opportunity was not practicable for a comparatively long time on account of his expert services being more needed as an instructor.

"When the order assigning him to duty with a squadron finally came on June 24th, he lost no time in reporting, and arrived in time to take part in the last great enemy offensive, where the combat work by his squadron was most strenuous, and aided materially in the success of the battle.

"Lieutenant Roosevelt had already brought down one enemy 'plane, and had aided the squadron in a number of fights against large enemy air formations, where the American units dispersed the enemy and brought down a number of their aircraft. His work during these combats was exceptionally good, his endeavour being the success of the squadron rather than to get individual airplanes to his personal credit.

"His loss was deeply felt by his flying comrades in the squadron, as well as by all officers and soldiers with whom he had ever come into contact."

R. O. VAN HORN,
Colonel, Air Service, Assistant Chief of Air Service.

LOST PLAY BY LOPE DE VEGA

TIMES TELEGRAM.
BUDAPEST, Monday.

Herr Stefan Zweig has announced that during his recent stay in England he discovered the lost manuscript of one of the plays of Lope de Vega, Shakespeare's famous Spanish contemporary. The play is entitled "La Coron. de Ungaria y la Injusta Vegenza," and was known to exist, but could not be incorporated among De Vega's works, of which a "full edition" was published by the Spanish Academy, as the manuscript had disappeared about 100 years ago.

COURT AND PERSONAL

The King and Queen spent Sunday at Windsor Castle, where the Duke and Duchess of Kent visited them and remained to luncheon. Their Majesties watched the march-past of the Rover Scouts and King's Scouts from the English counties and Wales, under the command of Sir Percy Everett, in the Quadrangle at the Castle in the afternoon.

To-day His Majesty leaves Windsor for Newmarket. He will spend four days at the Jockey Club, where he has a special suite of rooms. His Majesty will join the Queen at Buckingham Palace at the end of this week.

The Prince of Wales, with Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. Piers Legh, was present at the Empire Stadium, Wembley, for the Football Association Challenge Cup final last Saturday, when His Royal Highness had a gratifying reception and send-off.

Yesterday the Duchess of York was present in the Queen's Hall, London, where the joint festival of the Shaftesbury Society and Ragged School Union was held, and was attended by crowds of supporters. Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose, who were staying with Their Majesties at Windsor Castle, have now left and joined their parents.

The Duke of Kent, who now has his own Court Circular, attended the inter-divisional drill competition of the Metropolitan Special Constabulary at Buckingham Gate on Sunday afternoon. The Duke and Duchess are making numerous engagements, and have consented to attend the ball that will be held at the Dorchester Hotel, London, in aid of the Hertford British Hospital in Paris.

The Duke of Connaught returned to London yesterday, after a long stay at Bournemouth, from which he has derived much benefit.

The Duchess of Westminster has left Eaton Hall, Cheshire, and will spend a few days in London. The Marquess and Marchioness of Salisbury have left Hatfield House, and are in London for the season. The Marquess and Marchioness of Headfort returned yesterday to London from Ireland. The Marchioness of Waterford and Miss Madelaine Lindsay arrived in London yesterday on their return from South Africa. The Marquess and Marchioness of Reading left Walmer Castle yesterday for London.

Colonel Sir Archibald and Lady Weigall, who entertained a large house party for the week-end at Petwood, Woodhall Spa, returned to London yesterday. Their Guests included, with many others, Princess Marie Louise, the Earl and Countess of Jersey, Lady Georgiana Curzon, Viscount and Viscountess Elibank, Viscount and Viscountess Scarsdale, Viscount Curzon, Lord and Lady Churston, Lady Enid Turnor, Mdlle de Paravicini, and Sir G. and Lady Worthington-Evans.

Many Irish friends and football enthusiasts will learn with regret of the sudden death from heart failure of Mr. John Christopher Bagot, of Ballyturin, Co. Galway, which occurred last Friday night at Hill Top, his residence at Gresford, Denbighshire. He was a well-known Rugby international, and remained always an enthusiastic supporter of the game. He had the distinction of having kicked the winning goal in Ireland's first victory against Scotland.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. H. Tynte have arrived at Tynte Park, Dunlavin, for Punchestown.

Dr R. Hamilton Taylor has returned to 119 Lower Baggot street.

Dr. Kathleen Lynn has left 9 Belgrave road, Rathmines, for two weeks.

Miss Dara Galwey has returned to 33 Dawson street.

This week Switzers are showing a new range of Fancy French Kid Gloves and Washable Suedes in the latest shades (with Gauntlets); also Chamois and Hogskin Gloves in great variety.

GERMANY BUILDING SUBMARINES

FURTHER BREACH OF VERSAILLES TREATY

MENACE TO BRITISH SHIPPING

COMMONS QUESTIONS FOR FOREIGN SECRETARY

IN the House of Commons yesterday, Captain Sidney Herbert (Conservative) asked the Foreign Secretary whether he had been informed that the German Government had issued orders for the laying down of a number of submarine vessels, and for the re-opening of the submarine school at Kiel, and, if so, what steps it was proposed to take in view of this further violation by the German Government of the Treaty of Versailles.

Sir John Simon replied: "The German Government have intimated that orders have been given for the construction of twelve 250-ton submarines. The matter is now under consideration. No such official intimation has been made with regard to the submarine school at Kiel."

Sir Austen Chamberlain (Conservative) asked on what date the Government had received the intimation with regard to submarines.

Sir John Simon: "I have not the actual date here, but I think it was on April 25th."

Captain Herbert: "Does the Government propose to take immediate steps to bring to the notice of the League of Nations this further violation of the Treaty of Versailles, and is it proposed to go on with the arrangements for the proposed naval conversations next month between the British and German Governments?"

Sir John Simon: "As I have already said—and as the gravity of the matter obviously justifies—the matter is now under consideration, and I do not think Captain Herbert will press me to give a further answer to-day."

TRAINING SCHOOL AT KIEL?

Further questions were put in the House of Commons regarding Germany's submarine plans.

Captain Peter MacDonald (Conservative) asked: Has the Foreign Secretary been informed, as the Press has informed the public, that the submarine school at Kiel has been definitely opened and that ex-submarine officers have been called up for duty?

Sir John Simon—I said that no such official intimation has been made regarding the submarine school at Kiel.

Mr. Will Thorne—Are you satisfied now that in the conversations you had with Herr Hitler he did tell you all the truth?

DIRECTED AGAINST ENGLAND

Captain Herbert—I must ask the Foreign Secretary again whether the expressed intention of the German Government to start afresh the building of submarines does not constitute a proof—if, indeed, proof were needed—that German rearmament is particularly directed against this country?

Sir John Simon did not reply.

Mr. Vyvyan Adams (Conservative)—Before it may be too late, will the Foreign Secretary try to concert with the Stresa Powers, and, if possible, with Russia, measures to check this one-sided, dangerous and persistent repudiation of treaties?

No reply was given.

Subsequently Mr. Churchill (Conservative) asked the Speaker whether he could give any guidance to the House as to the scope of Thursday's debate on foreign affairs, and how far reference could be made to air and submarine armaments in Germany. He also asked on what date would be taken the second debate on the more technical issues connected with national defence, particularly with air defence, which had been arranged through the good offices of the Leader of the Opposition.

The Speaker said that as Thursday's debate would take place in Committee of Supply the question of what could, or could not, be discussed was one to be decided by the Chairman of Committees.

SEQUEL TO GENEVA VOTE?

GREAT GERMAN NAVAL ACTIVITY

The German decision to build submarines was, it is believed, taken only a few hours after the British decision to vote for the French resolution at Geneva condemning Germany's conscription move, according to information that reaches Reuter.

The suggestion is that Germany thought the vote showed that Britain had abandoned her rôle of negotiator in the European crisis, and definitely intended to side with France. In any event, the decision to build submarines appears to be a political decision of first-class importance.

A Government spokesman in the Wilhelmstrasse last night informed Reuter that no official comment was to be made in Berlin on the announcement by Sir John Simon in the House of Commons.

On Saturday an official of the Reichswehr Ministry categorically disclaimed that any submarines are being built.

One of the shipyard firms to undertake the work is understood to be Blohm and Voss, of Hamburg, and the others are at Kiel and Stettin. No work, however, has yet been done on undersea boats.

Meanwhile Germany is pushing ahead with characteristic efficiency with her naval plans. Visitors from Rostock, Lubeck, Stettin and other places along the Baltic coast report great activity in these cities.

A great seaplane base is being built at Rostock.

NO SURPRISE IN PARIS

The announcement that Germany has given orders for the laying down of the keels of twelve 250-ton submarines has caused no surprise in Paris (says Reuter's Correspondent there).

Political circles are principally interested to watch the British reactions. It is considered in some quarters that these submarines are too small and limited in their range to operate against the principal French trade routes which are in the Atlantic and Mediterranean, and that consequently they will constitute primarily a menace to British trade in the North Sea, the Channel and with the Baltic States.

But this consideration in no way affects the French condemnation of Germany's unilateral denunciation of the Versailles Treaty, whether by naval, military or air re-armament.

Anyway the present modest programme is generally regarded as only a prelude to the construction of bigger vessels.

The situation is complicated by divergent Franco-British attitudes regarding the rôle of submarines. France regards them as a defensive weapon, and has always stood out for a large number of them.

FRANCE, ITALY AND RUSSIA

PROGRESS OF NEGOTIATIONS

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Monday.

General Denain, the Minister for Air, is leaving for Rome on May 9th or 10th at the invitation of the Italian Government. His visit, Reuter learns, has three objects:—

(1) To draw up details of the air convention agreed upon at the Stresa Conference;

(2) To draw up plans for Franco-Italian collaboration in commercial aviation;

(3) To reinforce Franco-Italian technical collaboration, already begun.

General Denain expects to be three days in Rome and to spend six days visiting Italian aviation centres.

M. Laval, the Foreign Minister, and M. Potemkin, the Soviet Ambassador, talked for two and a half hours to-day. The negotiations are not yet ended, but it is learnt that both have agreed on the text of the agreement which M. Laval will submit to the Cabinet to-morrow morning.

M. Potemkin will visit M. Laval after the Cabinet.

It is expected that the agreement will be initialled very soon, perhaps on Wednesday, in which case M. Laval's departure for Moscow would be fixed for the beginning of next week.

ALL AIR LINES SUBSIDISED

BRITAIN'S AMONG LEAST COSTLY

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

GENEVA, Monday.

All air lines are subsidised, but only those in the United Kingdom, Finland and the Netherlands have traffic receipts exceeding the subsidies, according to an elaborate report dealing with the economic position of air transport in Europe in the years 1930-33, published by the League of Nations to-day.

In all the other countries the subsidies average at least 70 per cent. of the total revenue. The direct and indirect subsidies are estimated at about 650,000,000 French francs (£8,660,000) per annum in Europe alone.

Mails are relatively the most profitable pay load as compared with passenger costs.

NAZIS' CHURCH WAR

SUPPRESSION OF NEWS FOR ABROAD

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BERLIN, Monday.

The Government is making great efforts to close the last sources of non-official news of the German Church dispute to the foreign Press.

The secret police to-day arrested Dr. Paul Winckler, the Press chief of the provisional Evangelical Church Government under Bishop Marahrens, and Pastor Eduard Lindemayer, both of whom are accused of having given information to the foreign Press.

SEQUEL TO SUSPENSION

IRISH ROAD CLUB AND N.A.C.A.

TERMINATION OF AFFILIATION

THERE has been a sensational sequel to the international suspension of the National Athletic and Cycling Association of Ireland. The Southern Centre of the Irish Road Club, which is the premier cycle road-racing club in the country, has requested its affiliation to the N.A.C.A. to be terminated.

The Irish Road Club has Northern and Southern Centres, each enjoying virtual independence in its area. The two centres in conference, however, become, to all intents and purposes, the organisation qualified to speak for road racing, although each is affiliated to the governing body of cycle sport in its area.

Relations between the two centres were almost suspended when the Irish athletics "split" first occurred. Subsequently, when the cycling organisation in the North became recognised internationally the I.R.C. again became a united body.

Under Saturday's date the following letter was sent to Mr. J. J. McGilton, secretary of the N.A.C.A.:—

"The Northern and the Southern Centres of the Irish Road Club, in conference assembled at Dundalk, note with regret that the National Athletic and Cycling Association (I.) are now definitely under suspension by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, without the right of appeal against the decision of that body.

"The Southern Centre, therefore, has no desire to relinquish full national intercourse with kindred bodies promoting the sport of unpaced racing on the public highway, nor does it desire to forego the privilege of competing in cross-Channel road events.

"The Southern Centre, accordingly, requests the permission of the National Athletic and Cycling Association (I.) to terminate, temporarily, its affiliation until such time as agreement has been reached between the National Athletic and Cycling Association (I.) and the International Federation."

U.S. WAR PLAN SEQUEL

CANADA ASKS FOR INFORMATION

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Monday.

The disclosure by General Kilbourne, Assistant Chief of Staff in charge of War Plans, of the "camouflaged" provision for a powerful air base near the Canadian border, had a sequel here to-day.

Mr. H. Hume Wrong, the counsellor to the Canadian Legation, requested the State Department to supply him with a complete transcript of General Kilbourne's evidence before the House of Representatives' Military Committee.

It was at a secret meeting of the committee that General Kilbourne elaborated his proposal for an air base camouflaged under the name of "intermediate stations for trans-continental flights," in order, he said, not to give the impression that the United States no longer believed in the century-old principle that the Canadian border needed no defence.

LIMERICK BOY DROWNED

FATAL END TO FISHING EXPEDITION

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

LIMERICK, Monday.

The circumstances under which Christopher Myers, aged seventeen, of Little Clontarf place, Limerick, lost his life in a boating accident in the Shannon at Tervoe, Mungret, on Sunday evening were told at the inquest held at Mungret to-day by Dr. M. R. Clery, County Coroner.

The evidence showed that the deceased boy, his brother Michael, Joseph O'Sullivan and Michael Young, left the city during the day for Tervoe. They procured a boat and went fishing, in which they were engaged about an hour, when the boat sprung a leak and filled rapidly. As they were rowing to the shore Christopher Myers stood up, with the result that the craft capsized, and the occupants were thrown into the river. O'Sullivan and Young swam to the shore, a distance of thirty yards, and it was then noticed that Myers had disappeared, and that his brother Michael was in difficulties. O'Sullivan returned for Michael and succeeded in taking him ashore in an unconscious condition. Restoratives were applied, and he revived in half an hour.

The body of Christopher was recovered later, close to where the boat capsized, in fourteen feet of water.

The Coroner, who sat without a jury, recorded a verdict of accidental drowning, and expressed sympathy with the parents. The deceased boy was a nephew of Mr. Dan Breen, T.D., Tipperary.

THREE BROTHERS DETAINED

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

MALLOW, Monday.

Three brothers, Denis, Joseph and John Cronin, of Boherascrub, Bottevant, are at present detained at the Garda Barracks, Mallow. No information has been given as to the reason for the detention.

POST OFFICE SERVICES

JUBILEE YEAR CONCESSIONS

REDUCTIONS WILL COST £800,000

PENNY POSTCARD AND CHEAPER PARCEL POST

TO mark the Silver Jubilee of the King the Postmaster-General, Sir Kingsley Wood, announces a number of concessions in the Post Office services.

The concessions are estimated to cost in the first full year of their operation £800,000.

Telegram and telegraph charges will be reduced. Also there will be a cheaper parcel post.

The Postmaster-General also is intent on ensuring that by the end of 1936 no village on the mainland of Great Britain and Northern Ireland which has a Post Office will be without a public telephone.

With a view to still further improving Empire communications an imperial penny postcard rate will be introduced on June 15, instead of the present 1½d. charge.

The standard radio-telephone rates between Great Britain and the Dominions and India will, from May 6 until May 31, be reduced by one-half.

Northern Ireland will benefit by the concessions.

SUBSTANTIAL "CUTS"

Sir Kingsley Wood, replying to Mr. Attlee (Labour, Limehouse), in the House of Commons yesterday, said:—"I think it would be the desire of the House that precedent should be followed, and that the Post Office should be associated with the happy event of His Majesty's Silver Jubilee, as it was with the Diamond Jubilee of 1897.

"After consultation with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, I propose to introduce certain substantial reductions, and to take other progressive steps in relation to a number of Post Office services which, with the permission of the House, I will now describe briefly.

"In the first place I propose to reduce the charges for telegrams, which were increased during and after the War, and which, unlike most of the other Post Office charges, have not been modified since.

"Our telegraph service, though in the forefront of the world to-day in the methods of telegraph transmission, has, like that of other countries, suffered heavily from the competition of the telephones and telegraph traffic, and has declined, and is still declining.

TELEGRAPH ACCOUNT

"A loss, as the House knows, has been sustained on the telegraph account for many years, and a reduction in charges is likely at any rate for some further period to increase that loss. I have, however, after the most careful consideration, come to the conclusion that, accompanied by all possible efforts to effect every practicable economy in the working of the telegraph service, and to improve still further its efficiency, it would be in the best interests of the community that this service should be made, if possible, a still more effective and, I hope, popular method of communication in our commercial and social life, and that its charges should be reduced to a level comparable with those of other Post Office services.

"I propose, therefore, to introduce on May 31 a new rate of 6d. for nine words and 1d. for each additional word.

"Another important service on which I have received considerable representations from commercial and agricultural organisations, as well as from large numbers of the public, is the parcel post. The agricultural community, in particular, have pointed out that the present large steps of 3lb. in the scale of charges have tended particularly to handicap the despatch of small parcels of agricultural produce, and it has been urged also that the present limit of 11lb. is inconveniently low for many commercial undertakings.

"I propose, therefore, to introduce on July 1 a new scale of 6d. for 3lb., with 1d. for each additional lb. up to 9lb., and a flat rate of 1s. from 9lb. to 15lb.

"I am introducing these new rates in the belief that they may be of some assistance not only to industry, but particularly to agriculturists, at a difficult time.

THE TELEPHONES

"Turning to telephones, I think it will be recognised that the reductions which were introduced towards the end of last year were far-reaching in their scope, and they have largely contributed to an unprecedented telephone development in Great Britain. There is, however, I believe, still considerable scope for telephone expansion in our rural areas, which would also do much to assist our farmers, and also others who live in remote areas of the country. We are now about to take steps which will aim at making the telephone available in rural and remote parts of the country, as readily as it is in the cities and towns to-day. This must necessarily take time fully to accomplish, but as the first step I now propose to ensure, so far as practicable, that by the end of 1936 no village on the mainland of Great Britain and Northern Ireland which has a post office will be without a public telephone. This will mean an addition of over one thousand additional public telephone call offices in these parts of the country, which have hitherto been unable to possess that easy and rapid communication which our telephone system affords to-day.

THE POST CARD

"Finally, I know the House will be particularly desirous of improving still further our Empire communications, and on June 15th I propose to introduce an imperial penny postcard rate instead of the present 1½d. charge.

"As a special Jubilee concession also the standard radio-telephone rates between ourselves and the Dominions and India will, from May 6th until May 31st, be reduced by one-half.

"In making these announcements, which, I hope, the House will agree may not be unworthy of the occasion, I desire to say that they have largely been made possible by the firm foundations which have been laid by my predecessors in office, and that I am much indebted to the advice and assistance I have received from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, members of my Advisory Council, and the Director-General and other colleagues in the Post Office service."

THE NEW TELEGRAM RATE

TO BE INAUGURATED BY PRINCE OF WALES

Sir Kingsley Wood, speaking to a Press representative after his announcement in the House of Commons, said that the new telegram rate is to be inaugurated on May 31st by the Prince of Wales when he opens the new King George the Fifth Hall in the Central Telegraph Office.

"There is still a widespread public impression that telegrams are mainly used for the conveyance of bad news," said Sir

£26,000 IN STRIKE PAY

AMOUNT PAID BY TRAMWAY UNIONS

SETTLEMENT EFFORTS CONTINUED

IT is considered likely that there will be developments in connection with the Dublin tram and 'bus dispute to-day. The Joint Strike Committee will meet, and it is understood that they will receive a report from Mr. P. Fleming on the progress he has made since he intervened in the dispute last week. At the moment the situation is said to be very delicate, and none of the parties was inclined to discuss it yesterday. As far as can be gathered, Mr. Fleming made contact with the company yesterday, and will be in touch with both sides to-day.

The outcome of his efforts and those of others who have interested themselves in the dispute are being awaited with some little hope.

Yesterday's proposed meeting of the Joint Strike Committee of the two unions was called off. The business which would have come before it in the normal course will come before to-day's meeting.

COST TO THE UNIONS

The sustentation fund established by the Dublin Trades Union Council continues to grow, but the total amount received up to the present is far short of the sum required before even a first payment could be made to the men on strike.

It is estimated that up to the present the Amalgamated Transport and General Workers' Union has spent about £19,000 in the payment of dispute benefit, and that the Irish union has spent about £7,000. The Amalgamated Transport and General Workers' Union last week paid benefit to members on 1,836 children. These children were additional to those already covered by the 22s. per week payment to married men. Extra payments may be made to an even larger number of men in the near future.

In the meantime other sections of the Tramways Company's employés are suffering severely as a result of the stoppage.

Fairly substantial amounts are being paid to the members of the National Union of Vehicle Builders who are on strike.

The inspectors, however, who remain in the service of the company have been placed on half-time and are receiving half-pay.

The holiday plan put into operation by the company during the early stages of the dispute with a view to counteracting redundancy amongst the commercial staff and others has now been completed.

It is understood that the office staffs, with the exception of married men, have now been laid off. As a result many single men have been very badly hit, and some, who claim that they have dependents, have appealed against the decision. It is considered likely that these appeals will come before the board of directors this week, and that individual cases will be considered with a view to eliminating hardship as far as possible.

ATLANTIC AIR SERVICE

"UNLIKELY FOR FIVE YEARS," SAYS MR. MOLLISON

Mr. James Mollison, the airman, expressed his views on the question of a trans-Atlantic air service when he arrived at Queenstown from the United States yesterday aboard the Cunard-White Star liner Georgic.

Mr. Mollison told a reporter that he was of opinion that whilst a service might be started by way of Bermuda and the Azores, he did not think that a direct service from New York to London would materialise until probably at least five years hence. That would depend upon the strides made in aeroplane construction, and would only take place when a 'plane capable of becoming a paying proposition was constructed. Should that ever come to pass 'planes would fly by way of New York to Newfoundland, with Galway as the next logical stopping place.

The Irish Free State Government were, or should be, alive to that possibility. He predicted a prosperous future for Galway if an air service eventually materialised.

TWO MEN KILLED: TWELVE INJURED

A lorry, carrying workmen employed by the Cumberland County Council, got out of control on the famous Honister Pass, in the Lake district, last night, struck a bank and overturned, two men being killed and twelve injured.

The men killed were John Paskett, of Stonethwaite, Borrowdale, and Alfred Hodgson (60), of Keswick.

Four others were detained in hospital.

That the accident was not more serious was due to the presence of mind of the driver, William Moore, of Aspatria, who, realising that they were in danger of falling 60 feet into a stream, decided to turn the lorry into the bank on the other side of the Pass.

Honister has a maximum gradient of 1 in 3.8.

WEDDING AT CHESTER

The wedding took place very quietly at Chester yesterday of David, only son of the late Willem van Oosterwyk Bruyn and Mrs. van Oosterwyk Bruyn, of Kent Edge, Crockham Hill, and Chemaie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Craig-Martin, of Longford terrace, Monkstown, County Dublin. The Very Rev. Canon Hayes performed the ceremony at St. Werburgh's Church, and afterwards a reception was held at the Royal Hotel, Foregate street, Chester.

ANCHOR LINE LIQUIDATION

THE RESOLUTION DEFEATED

CUNARD COMPANY INTERVENES

AFTER intervention by the Cunard Steamship Company a liquidation resolution was defeated on a poll at a meeting of the shareholders of the Anchor Line (Henderson Brothers), Ltd., which was held in Glasgow yesterday.

Meetings of shareholders and creditors had been called by the directors to pass a resolution which would place the company in voluntary liquidation, and officially appoint a liquidator in view of the proposed sale of the fleet to the projected new concern, Anchor Line (1935), Limited.

The motion winding up the company was passed at the shareholders' meeting on a show of hands, with only one dissentient vote, that of the Cunard Steamship Company representative, Mr. H. Eaves, Assistant Secretary, who demanded a poll.

The result of the poll was announced as follows:

Against the resolution 59,300
For the resolution 8,448

The resolution was declared not carried.

The reason for the Cunard Company's opposition was explained at the creditors' meeting, when Mr. A. S. Mapostrophe Harg, chartered accountant, who was to have been the liquidator, read a telegram from the Cunard Company.

The purport of the telegram was repeated in the following statement given to the Press Association by the Cunard Steamship Company, Ltd., after the meetings:

"In view of the publicity given to the Anchor Line proceedings in Glasgow today the Cunard Steamship Company, Ltd., desire to make the following statement:

A STATEMENT

"The Cunard Company this morning despatched to the responsible parties the following message:

"'In our view the inclusion of the Anchor Line and Cunard Company in the prospectus as vendors, without previous consultation with shareholders of the former company, whose co-operation was necessary in order to carry out the deal, together with the implication that these companies are to receive a share in the proceeds of the sale, creates the risk of some legal action against the companies or their directors.

"'We ought to have been consulted before the terms of the prospectus or the terms of the agreement for sale were drafted. Consultations would have altered the form of both, and in regard to the latter, inter alia, would have prevented the vendors from including in the agreement for sale such things as the right to the Anchor Line flag in the Calcutta trade, which is no longer the property of the Anchor Company.

"'If the Union Bank will give the Cunard Company an undertaking to indemnify the Cunard and Anchor Companies, and all their directors, of whatever date, against the consequences of any legal action the Cunard Company is prepared to instruct its representative to abstain from voting.

"'It was the failure to obtain this undertaking which resulted in the Cunard Company recording a formal vote against the resolution, which was accordingly lost.'"

THE CREDITORS

Mr. M. Harg informed the creditors' meeting that they would have to go to the courts to have a liquidator appointed. The secured creditors, he said, would, as a body, lose about one million pounds, and the dividend on the claims of the unsecured creditors would be very small. All the capital had gone.

It is understood that the opposition of the Cunard Company relates only to the proposal to liquidate the company voluntarily, and not to the sale of the business. The objection to an official liquidation is that some weeks' delay is involved, which may prove prejudicial to the proposed sale.

FROM "THE TIMES"

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

WELCOME GUESTS

The Times observes in a leading article to-day:—With the exception of Mr. Forbes, who is due to arrive from New Zealand at the end of the week, all the Dominion Prime Ministers have now reached London to join in celebrating the King's Silver Jubilee. Their presence is an impressive demonstration of loyalty and affection by all the peoples forming the British Commonwealth of Nations. Widely separated over the earth's surface, differing in their history and in their national character, as well as in their circumstances, Canadian and Australian, New Zealander and South African are all united with one another and with the people of this country, which for many of them is still their home-land, in their eager desire to pay tribute on this occasion to the head of the family. Constitutional developments since His Majesty came to the Throne have left the Crown the one sure link which binds together all the King's Dominions, symbolising that unity of freedom which is the Empire's strength.

These twenty-five years have witnessed a steady growth in the devotion felt for the King and for the Royal Family in the Dominions, all of which he knows from his own visits, and in all of which the memory of his visits has been kept alive by visits from his sons. He has been no semi-mythical Monarch, commanding a conventional loyalty from his subjects in distant lands, but a real and human King, known to them all, and taking the keenest personal interest in everything which affects their welfare and their happiness. The Prime Ministers, who are gathering together in London from the ends of the earth, have come to demonstrate not merely the abiding unity of all the Dominions and their common allegiance to the Crown, but also the personal devotion which make that allegiance a deep and living reality in every part of the Empire.

NICE HORSE SHOW

FREE STATE RIDER WINS A ROSETTE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

NICE, Monday.

A member of the Irish Free State team, Captain Aherne, riding Ben Eadair, finished seventh, and was awarded a Rosette in the Pierre Gautier Cup event, held in connection with the Nice Horse Show to-day.

Captain Aherne's mount covered the course in 1 minute 32 seconds.

The winner was Captain Lopez Turrion, of Spain, mounted on Revistada. He had no faults, and his time was 1 minute 29 2-5 seconds.

Commandant J. G. O'Dwyer also competed, but his mount was very nervous, and could do nothing right.

IRISH TRADE WITH AMERICA

IMPROVING THE MARKET

DUBLIN TRADERS' DECISION

EXPORTERS' CONFERENCE TO BE CALLED

A CONFERENCE of Irish exporters to the United States is to be called by the National Agricultural and Industrial Development Association in order to devise means for improving the marketing of their goods and increasing sales in America.

This decision was reached at a meeting held at the Association's offices in St. Stephen's Green, Dublin, yesterday, after the Lord Mayor of Dublin had described his recent experiences in the United States, and after the United States Chargé d'Affaires (Mr. J. Orr Denby) and the Consul-General (Mr. H. M. Balch) had given their views on Irish-American trade.

THE EXCHANGE OF PRODUCTS

Mr. H. D. Pearson, the President, welcomed the Association's three guests, and pointed out that there are over twenty millions of the Irish race in America, and Irishmen had played a big part in promoting American industry. Therefore, he added, it was natural that the two countries should use every means in their power to exchange products.

Of the newly-formed Irish Chamber of International Trade, Mr. Pearson said that the organisation would have many difficulties to face in regard to quotas and exchange restrictions, but he wished it every success.

"It is our hope," he added, "that the day will come when it will be possible for all such organisations to have some common venue and place for their labours."

The Association would like to know from the Lord Mayor what classes of Irish goods could be sold to America in larger quantities; the reasons for the comparatively low exports from Ireland to the United States; did he consider that the commercial agencies representing Irish industries could increase the scope of their endeavour, and, if so, how; and did he believe that reciprocal trade pacts could be made in respect of articles which Ireland imports from elsewhere?

ENTHUSIASTIC MARKET

The Lord Mayor replied by saying that while in the United States he thought his opportunity was a splendid one to speak of the thirty-two counties—Ireland as a whole. In America there was an enthusiastic market, and he considered Irish manufacturers should capitalise that enthusiasm, because the sentiment for Ireland had a commercial value when we could sell goods.

The goods which he considered Ireland could best supply to the United States were: tweeds, woollens, homespuns, hams, linen, poplin, horses, beer and whiskey. To sell these goods an advertising campaign was essential, and he recommended newspapers as the best medium for putting Irish goods before the public.

"Despite the tariffs you, as manufacturers, have a large number of friends in America, and, with a little push, I think we should be able to obtain reduced tariffs for Irish goods under a reciprocal trade agreement. We must remember that at the present time our imports from the United States total nearly £2,000,000 per annum, while exports from the Free State to that country only amount to £122,000."

The United States had concluded trade agreements, under the special powers given to President Roosevelt by Congress, with Belgium, Italy, Holland and Spain, and the Lord Mayor considered that Ireland should make an effort to obtain a similar agreement.

SITUATION IN AMERICA

Mr. J. Orr Denby explained the background of the American situation to the meeting, and said that after President Roosevelt took office, during the economic depression of 1933, the first necessity was to face domestic problems.

"It was realised, however, that full industrial recovery could not be obtained without an increase in the export trade, and for this reason the Trade Agreements Act was passed in June last, giving the President power to reduce tariffs, down to 50 per cent. of their present rate, in order to make trade agreements. All the countries with which we trade have entered into negotiations for such agreements; in fact, sixty agreements are in process of negotiation, and we will be able to make a similar agreement with the Irish Free State."

In the United States there would be no "sales resistance" from the public as far as Irish goods were concerned.

"When the time comes," concluded the Chargé d'Affaires, "and I hope it will be soon, for an agreement to be negotiated I can assure you that the Legation will be at your service in every way."

DIRECT TRADING

The United States Consul-General said that the first efforts as regards selling goods in the United States must come from the individual manufacturers. He spoke of the present tariff arrangements, and pointed out that although America was always regarded as a high tariff country, about 60 per cent. of the goods it imported were free of duty.

"If you want to make an arrangement to favour Irish goods you must know just what you want to sell—textiles or hose or dairy produce. We have a committee investigating these matters, and you must classify the goods on which you want to have the tariffs reduced.

"After the official arrangement," Mr. Balch reminded his hearers, "you have got to sell your goods yourselves."

He referred to the difficulty of knowing the exact value of the trade between the two countries, since a great deal of it was done through England, a country with great experience as a commercial agent. Direct trading would be more favourable to Irish trade, in his opinion.

The United States has always been partial to cotton and woollen textiles made in the British Isles, so he thought Irish manufacturers might capitalise this, and extend their textile industry in tweeds, linen and hosiery. The large amount of Irish capital invested in the United States to some extent counteracted the big difference in the trade relations between the two countries.

HOLDING THE MARKET

Mr. R. Thompson (Vice-President) and Mr. J. B. O'Driscoll thanked the Chargé d'Affaires and Consul-General for their assistance to the Association, Mr. O'Driscoll commenting that it was no good getting the market on sentimentality alone. Irish goods must be able to compare favourably with those from other countries in order to hold the market. The Free State Government, he considered, should help the Irish manufacturers with the advertising campaign.

The same speakers proposed a resolution thanking the Lord Mayor for his work on developing Irish trade in America and providing for the holding of a conference of exporters to develop the inter-country trade.

Among the members of the Association present were:—Mr. Justice Meredith, Lieutenant-Colonel F. F. McCabe, Messrs. M. J. Noone, W. J. Whelan, P. O'Keeffe, D. Barry, M. J. Buckley, T. E. Booth, W. H. Lamb, T. E. Hudman, J. J. Holloway, D. Frame, E. O'Brien, S. P. Campbell, T. Elliott, E. Childers (Secretary), and Mrs. O'Connor (Assistant Secretary).

LATE START AT THE OPERA

LAST-MINUTE CHANGE IN LEADING PART

A brilliant first-night audience, who had obeyed Sir Thomas Beecham's edict and had arrived well before time at the opening night of the Jubilee season at Covent Garden last night, had to wait for the "Lohengrin" prelude to begin—seven minutes late.

Herr Max Hirzel, who was to have sung the part of Lohengrin, was suffering from a cold, and his part was taken by Mr. Lauritz Melchior, who had less than two hours in which to take over the part. Mr. Melchior did not arrive at Covent Garden until late. Then came the problem of finding costumes which would fit his magnificent burly figure. There were frantic scenes of hurry behind the stage while the great audience was assembling, and the preparations were only completed a few moments before Mr. Melchior's first appearance midway through the first act.

At seven o'clock exactly the doors of the auditorium were closed, and attendants stood outside to tell late-comers that they could not enter until the end of the first act. This was in accordance with a published announcement.

The house was crowded, hushed and expectant, but there was no sign of Sir Thomas Beecham.

Then—at five minutes past seven—when Sir Thomas did appear the impatient clapping changed to a storm of applause, which went on for two minutes, until the conductor tapped with his bâton.

In the Royal box were Princess Alice Countess of Athlone and the Earl of Athlone.

When the first act finished there were about twenty people waiting to enter. They were allowed in.

ASSASSINATION FEAR IN U.S.

MAN WITH KNIFE ARRESTED

From Reuter's Correspondent.

BOSTON, Monday.

Police here to-day arrested a man with a knife outside the State House on suspicion that he intended to assassinate the Italian Ambassador, then being received by the State Governor.

Just as Signor Augusto Rosso was entering the Hall of Flags at the State House detectives sprang ahead of his party and arrested a man.

Noticing a knife in the man's possession, and suspecting that he intended to assassinate the Ambassador, the officers snatched it from him and put him under arrest. The knife was unopened, but was of a type which flies open with the pressure of a button.

The suspect, who gave the name of Eugenio Camini (42), of Boston, was taken immediately to the Detective Bureau at police headquarters.

FOUR KILLED IN INDIAN RIOT

REVENUE OFFICIALS ATTACKED

"Times" Telegram.

DELHI, Monday.

Thousands of armed Jats, peasants found widely in Northern India, who form one of the fighting races of India, attacked Revenue officials and police of Sikar, Jaipur State, at Kudan village while the officials were collecting land revenue.

The police fired, four Jats being killed and fourteen injured. Eleven policemen were injured. Eighty arrests were made. Other gatherings of Jats have since been dispersed.

BOY KILLED BY MOTOR CAR

INQUEST ADJOURNED

From Our Correspondent.

WATERFORD, Monday.

At an inquest held by Acting Coroner Mr. George A. Nolan into the circumstances of the death Kieran Everett (14), Rathkieran, Mooncoin, Co. Kilkenny, Dr. Shipsey stated that death was due to hemorrhage following fracture of the skull, and the injuries were consistent with being knocked down by a motor car.

George Everett, the boy's father, stated that he, with his family, were having tea when his little daughter, Kate, rushed into the house, screaming that Kieran had been killed by a motor car. He went out and saw the boy lying on his side in the road. He saw the boy's lips moving, but that was the only sign of life in him. He was removed to hospital, where he died.

The inquest was adjourned for police inquiries.

WESTMINSTER'S NEW ARCHBISHOP

ENTHRONEMENT OF DR. HINSLEY

THE POPE'S CRY FOR PEACE

With sacred rites which date back through the centuries, the Most Rev. Arthur Hinsley was yesterday enthroned at Westminster Cathedral as Archbishop of Westminster, in succession to Cardinal Bourne.

The lofty nave, the galleries, the side chapels and aisles were crowded with people, who knelt as the new Archbishop, after being received at the main door by Bishop Butt, Provost of the Chapter, made his way slowly up the centre aisle beneath a great white and gold canopy, borne on gilded staffs.

With the Archbishop was the Senior Canon, bearing the sacred pallium enclosed in a silver case and covered with a white silk veil.

The pallium is the highest insignia of ecclesiastical dignity, and was received by the Archbishop from the Pope in Rome. It is an ornamented stole made from the wool of lambs, blessed at the Church of St. Agnes in Rome, and has lain for a night on the tomb of St. Peter.

Near the chancel the Archbishop entered the Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament and knelt in prayer.

The pallium was then laid upon the high altar for public veneration.

One by one the Provost, Canons and Cathedral Chaplains came forward and kissed the pallium, and then, in the secretarium, the Archbishop was vested in Pontificals and the pallium for the celebration of Mass which was to follow.

FIFTH ARCHBISHOP

On the left of the altar stood the gold and scarlet archiepiscopal throne, and here the Archbishop was placed by Bishop Butt.

He received homage from the clergy as they knelt before him and kissed his hand. Then the organ pealed out—the fifth Archbishop of Westminster had been enthroned to rule until "summoned by the Lord to the possession of the stole of immortality on a throne of the Heavenly Kingdom."

High Mass, ending with the Papal Blessing and the plenary pardon, followed, and from a seat in the chancel the Archbishop delivered his allocution.

THE POPE'S MESSAGE

In his allocution the new Archbishop, after paying a tribute to his predecessor, Cardinal Bourne, said that the message of hope and encouragement that he brought from Rome was the sovereign Pontiff's cry for peace. This was the impassioned appeal of the Pope for a world which was torn to pieces by war and by the ruinous results of international jealousies and strife.

The Catholic Church had ever condemned iniquitous war as disastrous and criminal, yet recognised the right of self-defence.

"We must, however," said the Archbishop, "insist that the efforts of statesmen and economists are vain to secure peace unless there be a turning to God or a return to God. Christ would then begin to reign in the family, so cruelly violated in its original sanctity by the pagan theories which pandered to selfish lust.

"God would then also begin to reign in the commercial and social relations of mankind, which had become so largely disordered through the tyranny of greed.

"Then would be His the kingdoms or states of the world which now set themselves up as idols to be worshipped and adored as God."

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS

The school question presented the most pressing problem for Catholic action.

"There are tens of thousands of Catholic children in this great metropolis who have not the opportunity to breathe the atmosphere of the faith in Catholic schools taught by Catholic teachers," went on the Archbishop.

He appealed for help to place Catholic schools in an unassailable position and to remedy, as far as possible, the "heart-breaking" leakage which resulted from any insufficiency.

He trusted that their fellow-countrymen, with their usual sense of justice—and even of generosity towards minorities—would sanction a broad national settlement of the education question, which would make for progress in secular training and instruction while giving to religion its due place in all schools, primary and secondary.

THE ROYAL JUBILEE

Referring to the King's Jubilee, the Archbishop spoke of the devoted loyal attachment of English Catholics to the Throne and of their prayers for the happiness of His Majesty and all the members of the Royal Family.

CORK BOY SHOT DEAD

STRUCK BY A STRAY BULLET

From Our Correspondent.

CORK, Monday.

While fishing with another boy in the River Lee at Inniscarra, near Cork, this evening, an eight-year-old boy named Laurence O'Brien, of 3 Nicholas street, Cork, was shot dead.

The bullet, which was a stray one, is thought to have come from a rook rifle.

The person who fired the shot is not known, and it is quite possible that he himself is unaware of the accident.

The boy was wounded in the lung, and died almost immediately.

An inquest is to be held to-morrow.

CANCER

TREATED BY X-RAY AND RADIUM THERAPY

The story of a woman who, suffering from cancer eight years ago, pleaded with a doctor to help her to live until her children were ready to leave school, and is now free of the disease, was told by Dr. Elizabeth Hurdon, Director of the Marie Curie Hospital, Hampstead, London, at a meeting of the women's auxiliary committees of the Christie Hospital and Holt Radium Institute, in Manchester, yesterday.

The woman was treated by X-ray and radium therapy. "One day last week," said Dr. Hurdon, "this woman came to see me. She was looking well and there was no sign of cancer."

Dr. Hurdon also mentioned the case of a girl of 18 who had received treatment five years ago. The disease was beyond the operative state, but now she is doing quite well.

Urging the need for clinics all over the country, she said that there was no known cure for cancer, but one might come at any minute. In the meantime a great deal was being done by X-ray and radium therapy.

POST OFFICE CONCESSIONS

Kingsley. "A recent confidential Post Office census has shown that this impression is not well founded. Less than two per cent. of all telegrams conveyed bad news.

"We believe that the sixpenny telegram will open up a new field for the exchange of social greetings and congratulations.

"Minor modifications will be made in telegram envelopes and forms, and messenger boys on telegraph duty will be distinguished by a new O.H.M.S. brassard.

PRIORITY SERVICE

"At the same time a supplementary priority service will be offered for the flat additional fee of 6d. per message. This fee will secure precedence for a telegram at all stages, and such telegrams will be distinguished by envelopes of a striking red.

"The cheap night telegraph letter service will be made available to any point in the country instead of being confined, as at present, to certain towns.

"The batch rate for large numbers of identical telegraph messages at present limited to a minimum of 2,000 messages, will, as from May 31, be available for batches of 100 or more identical messages. Batch telegrams will, in general, be accepted up to the close of the business day for delivery the following day, and will be charged for at a rate per message of 4d. for sixteen words, and 1d. for every four words thereafter, without charge for the address.

THE PARCEL RATES

"The changes in the parcel rates remedy defects in the old scale, which have been shown to hamper the usefulness of the service to the private individual, the wholesale and retail trader and the agricultural producer.

"From May 6 to May 31 the additional charge for radio-telephone calls to and from places in Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man will be dropped.

"These concessions have been approved by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and are estimated to cost the Post Office in the first full year of their operation some £800,000," added Sir Kingsley.

"LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER"

QUESTIONS IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

In the House of Commons yesterday, Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Arnold Wilson (Conservative, Hitchin) asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to an American film, entitled "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," in which Muslims were sprinkled with pig's blood and threatened with death in a pigskin by British officers, and whether, in the interests of good-will between India and other countries, he had made any representations on the subject.

Mr. Butler (Under Secretary) said that the Government of India's attention had been drawn to this film. They had not asked for representations to be made in regard to the matter, but they had power to take action in India to deal with films they considered objectionable.

Sir Arnold Wilson asked if the Government had taken any action in the matter in India.

Mr. Butler—I do not think they have taken any action in this case.

Sir Arnold Wilson also asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the wearing of uniforms closely resembling the uniforms of Indian cavalry regiments by the attendants at a cinema at which this film was now being shown, and whether he would take action in the matter under the Uniforms Act of 1894.

Mr. Butler—The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative, and to the second part in the negative.

Sir Arnold Wilson asked if he had seen the uniforms, and was he aware that during the Jubilee celebrations these men were masquerading for profit in uniforms like that of the Indian Army on the route of the Royal procession?

Mr. Butler—I have made a careful investigation of these uniforms, and have come to the conclusion that the dress bears a general resemblance to the Indian cavalry, but is, in fact, a fancy dress, and does not exactly represent the uniform of any particular regiment. There is no danger, therefore, of bringing the uniform of His Majesty's forces into ridicule or contempt, and there is no ground for any action.

Sir Arnold Wilson asked if he was aware that the 1894 Act provided a definite prohibition against the wearing of any uniform resembling the uniform of His Majesty's forces, and that it was not necessary to be an exact resemblance for action to be taken.

Mr. Butler—I have taken that into consideration and I do not think any action is called for.

RAILWAY LINE CLOSED

'BUSES REPLACE TRAINS

From Our Correspondent.

GALWAY, Monday.

The last train of the Galway-Clifden service ran to-day bringing all moveable stock into Galway.

From this morning four twenty-six seater passenger 'buses and six four-ton lorries will operate on the road. The men who were working on the line, numbering about fifty-eight, are being transferred to other areas all over the country.

The wages bill on the line was about £7,000 a year; the rates paid by the railway company in respect of this section of the line amounted to £1,200. The tax on the 'buses and lorries will be about £700.

The officials of the railway and I.O.C. state that Connemara will be better served by the 'bus and lorry service, and one official held that a fifty per cent. improvement in service will result.

NEW LIMERICK FACTORY

OPTION ON SITE EXTENDED

From Our Correspondent.

LIMERICK, Monday.

Messrs. Scallan and Co., solicitors, Dublin, wrote to Limerick Harbour Board to-day asking to have the period of the option of land acquired from the Board by the Irish Wire Products Company extended. This was necessary in view of the fact that the time for making the public issue was a matter for the Industrial Credit Company.

Recently this company, the Mayor said, had made two public issues, and it was not considered advisable to make another issue at once. The chairman of the proposed company, Sir Lingard Goulding, and Mr. Plunkett Dillon, solicitor, had visited the site of the proposed factory, which they considered very satisfactory. The factory would be one of the most up-to-date in Europe, and actual building operations would be commenced in a couple of months time.

The Board extended the option period on the land for two months.

JACK DOYLE MARRIED

From Reuter's Correspondent.

SAN DIEGO, Monday.

Jack Doyle, the Irish heavy-weight boxer, and Miss Judith Allen were married at Agua Calienta last night.

OBITUARY

MR. WILLIAM FIELD

The death of Mr. William Field, one of the few remaining members of the old Irish Parliamentary Party, occurred at St. Michael's Hospital, Dun Laoghaire, yesterday evening. Mr. Field was born in 1846, and lived a most active public life. He was a successful man of business, and for fifty years was identified with many movements for social and economic reform, and a figure of note in Irish politics. He was for 27 years a Nationalist member of the House of Commons. In numerous ways he assisted in promoting educational, commercial and economic progress by his membership of many public organisations and clubs by speech-making and writing. He was an indefatigable propagandist, as well as a politician and playwright. In person Mr. Field was known to a very wide public in Great Britain and Ireland by his distinctive dress. For about sixty years he never changed the fashion of his dress.

Mr. Field was educated at the Harcourt Street School, Dublin, and at the Catholic University. During all his life he lived at Blackrock, County Dublin, and carried on an extensive business there in two shops. His interest in the victuallers' trade was comprehensive of all its connections. He was elected President of the Irish Cattle Traders' and Stockowners' Association and the Dublin Victuallers' Association, and represented these bodies and the British meat trade organisation while a member of the House of Commons. In 1892 he was elected to Parliament as member for the St. Patrick's Division of Dublin in the Parnellite interest, heading the poll over the late Mr. William Martin Murphy, the founder of the Dublin electric tramway system. He continued to represent that constituency until the Irish Parliamentary Party, under the leadership of the late Mr. John Dillon, almost disappeared at the general election of 1918, when the power of Sinn Fein was publicly established with a policy of non-attendance at the House of Commons. Mr. Field was a member of the Blackrock Urban Council from its inception until it was absorbed in the Borough Corporation of Dun Laoghaire. He was always a vigilant advocate of the wider interests of the Port of Dublin, and was for many years a member of the Port and Docks Board. He was a member of the Dublin Chamber of Commerce and of the Dublin Mercantile Association, and director of the Hibernian Fire and General Insurance Company and of the Meat Trades' Journal. He was chairman of the Blackrock Technical Education Committee, a Governor of the Royal Irish Veterinary College, a member of the Departmental Committee on Irish Food Production in 1915, and on the Humane Transit of Live Stock. He wrote two plays. Mr. Field was a bachelor.

Mr. William Field.

THE HON. LADY McCALMONT

The Hon. Lady Rose Elizabeth McCalmont, whose death at Funchal, Madeira, was reported in yesterday's Irish Times, was a great sportswoman and represented a genial type that is gradually disappearing. She was the youngest daughter of the fourth Baron Clanmorris, and in 1885 she married Sir Hugh McCalmont, K.C.B., who died in 1924. She was one of the keenest followers of hounds in the British Isles, and was always a central figure wherever hunting people foregathered. Her unassuming manner and charm of character and her all-round sporting qualities endeared her to everyone. At the age of 74 years she took over the Mastership of the Kildare Hounds in 1932, and during her term of office showed excellent sport. It must be unique in the annals of hunting for a lady of such advanced years to undertake the onerous duties that such a position entails, but that she was fully qualified for it was proved by the success which attended her Mastership. She was the aunt of the present Baron Clanmorris. In 1921 she was awarded the Medaille (first class) de la Reconnaissance Française. Her son is Major Dermot Hugh Bingham McCalmont, the present Master of the Kilkenny Hounds, whose wife, Lady Helen McCalmont, is a well-known owner of racehorses and huntswoman.

Mr. Harold Clarke, of the Turf Club, Dublin, speaking of the late Lady McCalmont, said: "She was a great sportswoman, and I could not say too much about her lovable personality. She was one of the old style, who mixed freely with everyone, and did wonderful work in taking over the Kildares. She will be sadly missed by her many friends."

LADY LANE

Lady Lane, wife of Sir William Arbuthnot Lane, the well-known author of medical works, has died at their residence in Portland place, London. Younger daughter of John Briscoe, formerly of Tinvane, Co. Tipperary, she was a member of the Order of the British Empire and a Dame of Grace of St. John of Jerusalem. She married in 1884, and leaves a son and three daughters.

Sir William and Lady Lane celebrated their golden wedding last October.

MR. JOHN THOMPSON

Mr. John Thompson, "Winstonville," Malahide road, Clontarf, whose death has taken place after a prolonged illness, was a partner in the firm of Rutledge and Thompson, Corn Exchange place, Dublin. He was well known in commercial circles throughout Ireland. A native of Banbridge, Co. Down, he came to reside in Dublin when a comparatively young man. He is survived by his son and two daughters.

Miss Phyllis Kelly, who is adjudicating the English Elocution Competitions at the Father Mathew Feis, Cork.

BIG STATES BACK FEDERAL PLAN

From Reuter's Correspondent.

SIMLA, Monday.

Adhesion to the federation plan of at least 51 per cent. of that part of India ruled by the Princes is regarded in official circles here as virtually certain, it was learned to-day.

Among the larger States whose entry into the federation is counted on are: Hyderabad, Travancore, Mysore, Gwalior, Kashmir, Jaipur, Jodhpur and Udaipur.

THE GARDENS OF AUSTRIA

LINGERING ECHOES OF FORMER GLORY

THE IMPERIAL PARK AT SCHONBRUNN

(By DR. HANS TIETZE.)

An old painting is blackened with age; a bronze bust puts on a coating of patina; a marble figure is smashed into a torso—and yet they all still continue to be the same subject as they were when they came from the hands of the artist, only they have become a little more venerable by the marks of time. And the Palace and the church still remain the same old stone, over the original plan, even though their daily use has made it necessary here and there to repair a worn-out portion.

It is different with the garden. It, too, is a work of art; the Muse of Horticultural Art has long taken her place among her sisters of the "Fine Arts," but she is subject, far more than the others, to the requirements of the times. As, year by year, its paths and beds are renewed, it becomes endowed wit hnew life, so that the honour of being put under protection as a national monument finds no place here. The original artistic plan is soon forgotten; the old garden is no museum specimen: it is closely united with the men of its day; their grandchildren have other wishes than their grandfathers had, and the garden must accommodate itself.

AUSTRIAN GARDENS

Most of the Austrian gardens had to disappear, because they played such a very great part in the lives of their times. Nothing remains of Vienna's gardens of the Middle Ages, whose delight in gardens is praised by all the old chroniclers, but, at all events, of the princely gardens of the sixteenth century, we have engravings, to supplement the extravagant descriptions of their contemporaries. Unfortunately, these topographical sheets are, for the most part, pedantic and sober, and do little more than enumerate them. There is an engraving by Merian, which shows us the garden of Archduke Ferdinand of Tyrol at the castle of Ambras, near Innsbruck, the princely residence of the fair Philippine Welser, where there were "hanging gardens" and wire-enclosed aviaries, grottoes and fountains, and, as a special sensation, the circular table, which was continually spinning swiftly round till the guests got giddy; or another sheet by Merian, showing the park which Ferdinand's brother, Emperor Maximilian II., had laid out at the Neugebäude, near Vienna, but half a century later the whole extensive grounds had become utterly waste, and remained a ruin till quite recent times. Here, too, a new garden has been laid out, the cemetery garden of the crematorium. When we look through the details of this old engraving—a parallel to which can be found in the garden on the Rosenberg, which has run to waste except for a few picturesque remains—these grounds were not only a reservoir of pleasure and odour, shady in summer and treeless terraces for the winter, they also provided amusement for the visitors.

AT HELLBRUNN

A good example, which has remained intact in most of its parts is the park in Hellbrunn, near Salzburg, which Archbishop Marcus Sitticus had laid out (1613-1619), albeit by the Italian architect Solari, the fountains and automatic devices, which tradition has handed down in literature as existing in so many Italian gardens, can here be seen still in operation. Where the hill rises there is a theatre hewn out of the rock, in which, to-day, sodden moisture is dripping from the walls; in the days when Marcus Sitticus had pastoral plays acted here, he would probably first have been obliged to have the stage built on a substructure.

The garden at Mirabell Palace, in Salzburg itself, which only dates from the time of Archbishop Johann Ernst (1687-1790), has still preserved the original Renaissance character in its contours; it does not match the palace, the chief garden is enclosed within high walls, the parterre surrounded by balustrades. The open air theatre, with its green clipped side scenes, is a graceful counterpart of Hellbrunn's theatre of sombre stone.

THE IMPERIAL PARK

Perhaps the great Fischer von Erlach had a hand in the laying out of this park. His share in the imperial park of Schonbrunn, in Vienna, has been obscured by Maria Theresia's elaboration, nevertheless the vision of the crowning of the hill, as it was carried out three-quarters of a century later, in the form of a glorietta, by the architect Hohenberg, dates back to Fischer. Schonbrunn is more beautiful and more extensive than the neighbouring Hildenbrandt palaces of Belvedere and Schwarzenberg, which Prince Eugene and his opponent in the council of war, Count Fondi-Mansfeld, had built before the city walls of Vienna. They have long been incorporated within the city limits, but their chief charm is still their truly unique view over the old city. Schonbrunn unites elements of Italian—the stretches of water—and French character—the broad avenues between walls of yew bushes, which the Dutch landscape gardener, Adrian von Steckhoven, constructed, all focussing on the palace. His successor, the horticultural theorist and sculptor, Beyer, with his fertile fancy, took a hand in setting out the park, and it was he who embellished the parterre and all the prominent points in the network of avenues, with statuary and magnificent fountains.

But, half hidden in the shade of the hill, Hohenberg erected a "Roman ruin," an archaeological plaything of Winckelmann's days of classical tendencies, in which, however, the romantic atmosphere of the English park is noticeable. This has also found its way into the pleasure parks of the Esterhazys at Eisenstadt (Burgenland), while the real central garden is still laid out in complete accordance with the taste of Schonbrunn. Its great triumph was attained at Laxenburg, near Vienna, where, even to-day, the Franzensburg impresses the unspoilt public with all the thrills of knightly adventure.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

The 19th century, in its democratic gardens, long preserves the lingering echo of the former glory. Here there is no climax, no magnificent prospects, the gardens prosaically serve the purposes of the public as hygienic islands in the stuffy ocean of houses; at the same time, they are still instructive by reason of their well-ticketted rare plants and monuments to the memory of famous sons of the city—albeit, only of peaceful champions of cultural progress. A good example of this is the Vienna Stadtpark (city park) of 1862.

The present day has set itself a different task; wherever it is possible it allows a little grass to grow between the houses, but it is of far greater importance to convey the town dweller quick and cheap into the country, and to keep intact for him the "wood and meadow zone" which surrounds his ocean of houses. The words which the Hungarian historian, Bonfini, wrote in the year 1477 in his description of Vienna will remain true: "The whole district is one immense magnificent garden, crowned with beautiful rising vineyards and orchards."

SPECIAL GUARDS BUSY

CATTLE SEIZED NEAR FERMOY

From Our Correspondent.

FERMOY, Monday.

The special force of Civic Guards, who have headquarters at Fermoy Aerodrome, commenced operations early this morning. Provided with cattle lorries, they visited the residences of some farmers in the Templemore district, near Fermoy, where settlements of land annuities' decrees were effected, and, consequently, no seizures were made. On their way to make seizures on the lands of James Whelan, Ballyclough, Kilworth, the road was blocked by a large tree which had been felled, and, the obstacle having been removed, two lorry loads of cattle belonging to Mr. Whelan were conveyed to the Pound. The lands of Thomas Keating, Roxborough, Kildorrery, were also visited and two lorry loads of cattle seized.

DUBLIN OPERATIC SOCIETY

"FAUST" AT THE GAIETY THEATRE

The Dublin Operatic Society are to be congratulated on their boldness of spirit in putting on for their season at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, two such exacting works as Gounod's "Faust" and Verdi's "Il Trovatore." They are immensely popular operas, with every note of which Dublin audiences are familiar, and the venture of the Society was all the more commendable, therefore, in that they were prepared to submit themselves to the keenest criticism.

Certainly on their performance of "Faust" last night they have every reason to feel gratified. Shortcomings there were—one does not like to say they are inevitable with amateur productions, because the standard of the work is far above that one expects from amateurs—rather were they such weaknesses as one might find with even a good professional company. It was merely a matter of rehearsal on the stage—another full-dress rehearsal would have tightened everything up; and one feels that last night's performance has closed up the chinks. Maestro Cavre, Adelio Viani knows his work thoroughly, and will have seen at last night's show what little touches are necessary to weld the whole thing into a well-finished production.

There was the suggestion last night that he was making sure of every separate section. He polished off each facet in turn, but in his anxiety to round them off he was rather inclined to keep them somewhat detached, and at times there was an appreciable delay, rather hesitation in advancing. Now that everything has gone off all right, however, he will, no doubt, considerably speed up the further productions. But all this may sound too hypercritical of a work that was really very enjoyable, and which drew from the audience well-merited applause.

It was no doubt a great advantage to have in the name part as guest artist Heddle Nash, the distinguished English tenor, who is due to appear at the new Covent Garden season. Very naturally his presence excited the keenest interest, and let it be said at once, that he lived up to expectations. From the opening scene in the alchemist's laboratory to the closing scene he sang with splendid understanding and appeal. The quality of voice was beautifully rich and warm, with just a shade of huskiness that added to the message of the music. He was always well over the melodic line, and delivered his music in splendid phrases, with a clarity of diction that provided an object lesson for aspiring singers present. His rendering of the familiar "All hail" was masterly, and had to be repeated.

Throughout he was well supported by J. C. Browner, who brought ripe understanding and experience to the part of Mephistopheles. One felt that there was not a trick in the whole Mephistophelean stock-in-trade that he was not up to, and he brought them all to aid in a first-rate interpretation of the part. His voice has still a splendid resonance and flexibility, and his words came through very clearly. His "Calf of Gold" and later the Serenade were sung with a great flourish.

Veronica Keary was the Marguerite, and again this talented soprano rose to the occasion. She was demure and shy in her opening work, and responded well to the calls on the part. The King of Thule was daintily sung, and she went on to a splendid rendering of the Jewel scene. Her voice in the exacting climax of this scene came through beautifully and well restrained, and free of vibrato. She had a beautiful scene in the big duet, "Let Me Gaze," with Heddle Nash. In fact, this whole garden scene was one of the best things done in the opera. The quartet was composed of the three singers already named and Miss Rita Fitzsimons as Martha. A newcomer in a principal part,

A NEW FLYING RECORD

MISS BATTEN IN ENGLAND

RETURN FLIGHT FROM AUSTRALIA

Miss Jean Batten arrived at Croydon at 1.15 yesterday and thus completed the double journey from England to Australia and back.

She is the only woman who has accomplished the journey in each direction by herself.

Her flight from Darwin (North Australia) to Rome occupied 14 days, and she took three days to get from Rome to Dijou, being held up at Foggia, Marseilles and Lyons by magneto trouble, a puncture and bad weather.

On her last hop from Dijon yesterday she was again forced to come down at Abbeville at 10.30, but got off again at 11.25, and eventually reached her goal.

Crowds were waiting outside the aerodrome to cheer Miss Batten as she entered a car to drive to London, and she smiled and waved cheerfully to them. She was dressed in khaki trousers and a fur coat.

THE MORE DIFFICULT WAY

"I have had a terrible time these last few days," she said on landing. "It is much harder to fly from Australia to England than it is to fly the other way. I have had head winds all the way from the Equator.

"The reason I put down at Abbeville this morning was because I was not quite satisfied with my engine.

"I am not disappointed with the flight. I am very pleased to have got here at all, and am glad it is all over."

Miss Batten has established a new flying record and broken another. She is the first woman to fly alone to Australia and back, and, with an outward flight of 14 days 23 hours, she beat the woman's record of 19 days set up by Mrs. Mollison in 1930.

She is the second woman to make the return flight. The first was Mrs. Bonney, the Australian airwoman, who accomplished it in 1933.

Miss Batten has taken 17 days 16 hours 15 minutes, and would have beaten her own record made on the outward flight but for engine trouble on the last lap over France.

FOUGHT IN SIX WARS

DUBLIN MAN'S RECORD

TOOK PART IN JAMESON RAID

From Reuter's Correspondent.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Monday.

A MAN who served in six wars, Mr. Charles George Frederick Wheeler, died here to-day at the age of seventy-nine years. He held the remarkable service record of forty-two years in the Army and Navy.

Born in Dublin, Wheeler was the son of a naval officer. Entering the Navy he served as a youth against the Slavers on the East African coast.

In 1879 he fought with the Naval Brigade in the Zulu war. At the bombardment of Alexandria he was a member of the boat's crew which spiked the guns at Fort Pharos, and was present at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir. He later served in the Gordon relief expedition.

After some service in Somaliland Wheeler left the Navy with the rank of Chief Gunner. He then enlisted in the Army for service in South Africa, and later transferred to the Bechuanaland Police Force. He was expelled from South Africa for taking part in the Jameson raid.

He served in the second Boer War in the Rhodesian Horse, and was promoted for gallantry at the relief of Mafeking.

Wheeler then settled down in Canada, and on being refused permission to enlist at the outbreak of the Great War, on account of his age, he wrote a personal letter to Lord Kitchener, under whom he had served in Africa. Lord Kitchener cabled the offer of a captaincy in the Royal Irish Rifles, with which regiment Wheeler served until the age of sixty, when he retired and returned to Canada.

Towards the end of the Great War he did valuable secret service work in Canada.

IRISH PEERESS'S GIFT

INDIAN JUBILEE FUND

"Times" Telegram.

SIMLA, Monday.

The Dowager Lady Dufferin, who left India in 1888 when her husband's term of office as Viceroy expired, has sent Lady Willingdon a contribution of £100 to the Jubilee Fund, which is to be ear-marked for the renovation of the Dufferin Hospital in Calcutta.

Lady Dufferin was a pioneer in medical work among the women of India, and the fund she established 50 years ago has been selected by the King as one of the beneficiaries of the Indian Jubilee Fund.

this lady showed excellent talents. She had the traditional humorous by-play with Mephistopheles, and carried her line well, but now that her baptism is over she must not be afraid to let out that big voice of hers. It was inclined to be held in too much in the quartet last night.

William Lemass was the Valentine, and one got from him that standard of excellence one always expects. He is ever perfectly sure of himself; knows his work inside and out, and one feels that when he is on the stage everything is safe. There is just one little criticism to offer—he would improve his singing of the first aria, "Even Bravest Hearts," by speeding it up. It just hung fire last night.

Ella Clarke was the Siebel, and she sang her two arias with a fine dramatic touch. Edward Hartney, who was Wagner, seemed overcome by the occasion. It was rather a pity, as, though the part is small, much of the work at the opening of the Market Place scene hangs on it, and the men's chorus and song rather suffered in consequence. However, the timely arrival of Mephistopheles got over an awkward moment. There was also a bad moment at the beginning of the famous waltz, but that, too, righted itself, as did the jam in which the chorus found themselves when, having left the stage after the Soldiers' Chorus, the audience insisted on having them back with the No. 1 Army Band, who had appeared in this scene.

The ladies were more convincing than the men, but there were some excellent passages, notably at the death of Valentine. The ballet was a delightfully artistic performance, which was much enjoyed.

Mr. Sydney Russell, the producer, held largely to the traditional settings, and these were capital.

Taken all round, it was a very commendable and enjoyable production, and one looks forward with eagerness to the Society's performance of "Il Trovatore" to-night.

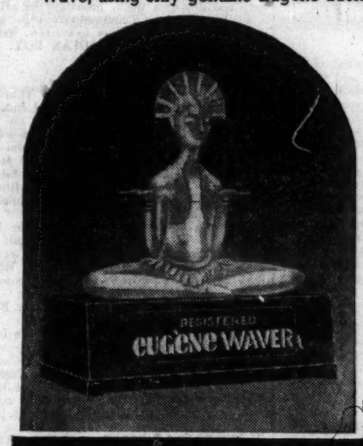
Ladies! this is vitally Important to your next Permanent Wave

YOU can go confidently into any Hairdressing establishment displaying this Sign in the safe and certain knowledge that you will get the best that permanent waving has to offer—a Genuine Eugène Wave. For to safeguard the reputation the name "Eugène" has earned the world over for perfect permanent waving, and, still more important, to protect the interests of the millions of women who demand Eugène Waving, all Hairdressers using the genuine Eugène Method are now officially REGISTERED. Look for the Sign of the Registered Eugène Waver. It is only awarded to those Hairdressers who definitely undertake to create the best permanent wave—a genuine Eugène Wave, using only genuine Eugène Sachets.



IMPORTANT
Do not be misled by Hairdressers who offer a "wave by the Eugène System" . . . a "Eugène Machine wave" . . . . . a "Eugène 'type' Wave" . . . . or a wave on the "Eugène principle." Unless they display this "Registered Eugène Waver" Sign prominently they are not officially recognised as Registered Eugène Wavers. Remember this important fact.

COUNTY DUBLIN WEDDINGS

MR. W. T. BOYD AND MISS M. E. HOBBERT

The marriage took place yesterday in St. Paul's Church, Glenageary, County Dublin, of Mr. W. T. Boyd, son of Mr. C. Boyd, of Cappoquin, County Waterford, and Miss Mary E. Hobbert, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Hobbert, Marino, Sandycove, County Dublin. Canon D. H. Hall performed the marriage ceremony. The bride wore a becoming rose pink frock with a picture hat to tone, and carried a bouquet of roses. She was given away by her father. Miss Elsie Hobbert, sister of the bride, wearing a flowered silk frock and a large black hat, and carrying a bouquet of tulips, was the only bridesmaid. Mr. Cyril E. Connolly acted as best man.

After the ceremony a reception was held at "Ventnor," Newtownsmith. During the afternoon the bride and bridegroom left for a tour in the South and West of Ireland. The bride travelled in a navy blue two-piece, with a hat to tone.

Among the guests were:—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Connolly, Mrs. Connolly, Miss F. Connolly, Miss D. L. Hobbert, Miss G. Hobbert, Mrs. J. Wilson, Mr. W. Connolly, Mr. G. Connolly, the Rev. and Mrs. MacKay, Miss H. Winslow, Miss P. Masterton, Mr. D. S. Morse, Miss P. Connolly.

MR. O. HANRATTY AND MISS K. O'CONNOR

The marriage took place in St. John the Baptist Church, Blackrock, County Dublin, early yesterday morning, of Mr. Owen Hanratty, manager for Dublin for the firm of P. J. Carroll and Co., Dundalk., and Miss Kitty O'Connor, B.A., B.Comm., 66 Adelaide road, Dublin, Secretary of the Irish Folklore Institute.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at the Marine Hotel, Dun Laoghaire. Later the bride and bridegroom left for their honeymoon, which will be spent in Scotland.

TWO BROTHERS DROWNED

FATAL FISHING TRIP

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

LETTERKENNY, Monday.

Two young brothers—Patrick and John McFadden, Bunaninver, Derrybeg—lost their lives while fishing off the coast of Innishfarrar Island on Sunday night.

The boys, who had considerable experience of the sea, set out in a small curragh to fish, and on the trip decided to exchange seats in the craft. In attempting this the curragh overturned and both boys were precipitated into the sea and sank almost immediately.

The accident took place only two or three hundred yards from the shore.

The body of John was recovered at half-past seven this morning twenty yards from the mainland, and that of his brother some hours later.

FOUND IN RIVER

The body of John McDaid, Glen Rameltton, missing for a fortnight, was found in the River Lennon, near Ballyare, yesterday. A verdict of death from drowning whilst temporarily insane was returned at an inquest.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE

THEFT NOT IN FAVOUR

Selections for the First Day at Newmarket

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

NEWMARKET, Monday.

THE cold wind, which has been harassing for many weeks, now seems to have died away, and it is milder and warmer here. The going could not be better for the opening of the First Spring Meeting to-morrow.

Conditions were ideal this morning when some of the candidates for the Two Thousand Guineas had their last gallop.

Prejudice Against Theft

I find here a considerable amount of prejudice against Theft, and it is said that he has not been going so well as before he went to Newbury to win the "Greenham." Cynical people might recall the case of Flamenco, and say that the fact that Newmarket does not like him is a good reason for supporting Theft.

Bahram, on the other hand, gives general satisfaction. Nothing, however, is stirring the sluggish imagination here so much as Lord Derby's colt, Bobsleigh. Everyone was again delighted with him when he went about nine furlongs on the Water Hall this morning.

Buckleigh is reported to have done exceptionally well since he won the Craven Stakes so easily from Hindoo Holiday, and I believe that Captain Hogg fancies him a good deal to win outright. He may win, but I still cling to the opinion, formed after the "Craven," that the colts that finished behind him were either backward or bad. I would not use the latter word of Hindoo Holiday, whom I believe will be a good one later on. He was definitely backward three weeks ago.

The Hastings Stakes

It is not a very taking card with which the meeting opens to-morrow, the principal event being the Hastings Stakes for three-year-olds. Run across the flat, it is as fine a test of speed and stamina as I know for a three-year-old. Those engaged have not so far lifted themselves from the second rank, but one may do so to-morrow. A good deal is thought of Meridian Boy, a colt by Tetratema, out of that good dam of so many winners, Deocaun, in Templeman's stable.

Rosecrag was beaten by Swift Reynard a hot favourite at the last meeting here, and none of the others have any semblance of form, except the King's colt, Marconi. He ran well at the last meeting here, and at Kempton, where he finished fourth, running on strongly from behind. He must have lost half-a-dozen lengths at the gate. It is understood that His Majesty will be here one day this week, probably the afternoon of the One Thousand Guineas, and Marconi may win for him to-morrow, but I prefer the chance of MERIDIAN BOY.

The Thurlow Handicap

Robber Chief can have, in the Thurlow Handicap, the race that was denied him at Epsom, where he threw Perryman on his way to the post, and his number was withdrawn. Symptom and Bird's Eye, who are also engaged in this race, finished in front of him at the last meeting here. He meets the former on 5lb. better terms, and Bird's Eye at a 3lb. advantage. All three finished close together.

The race is run, like the one at the last meeting, over the last mile and a half of the Cesarewitch course, and there is not a great deal to choose between them. What advantage there is in it seems to favour who has been working regularly with Bobsleigh.

TETRAZONE

and Badr-ul-Molk, and I choose the former to win, though it may be pointed out that Whipper In was not too lucky on the occasion of his first appearance at Newbury.

Sharnbrook's Chance

Unless SHARNBROOK is any the worse for the hard race he had at Epsom, when just beaten by Straight Deal, he should win the Maiden T.Y.O. Stakes. In his absence I would take the French Kiss colt, who was beaten by a useful one in New Radnor at the last meeting here. GALTEE MORE.

103 DECLARED RUNNERS

Avondale and Envy may Atone for Fairyhouse Defeats

Special Train—11 a.m. from Kingsbridge.

VISITORS to Punchestown this afternoon should be assured of steeplechasing of the usual high-class standard always seen on the famous course. One hundred and three horses have been declared as runners for the first day alone, which must be something approaching a record, and we are informed that the going is in well-nigh perfect order. All that is required for the success of the meeting, consequently, is a continuance of the fine weather which has favoured us for the past week, and at time of writing there is no indication that there will be any change.

The Maiden Plate and Prince of Wales's Plate, as usual, are the principal events for the opening day. Avondale is afforded an opportunity in the Prince of Wales's Plate to atone for her defeat in the Irish Grand National over a journey which is a mile shorter than the Fairyhouse race. At this shorter distance Mollison must also come into the reckoning; for it will be remembered that Mrs. Bennett's horse was going as well as anything else at Fairyhouse until the last mile was encountered. The race looks to be between these two, and if there is to be a surprise it may be effected by either Cupid's Cottage, who is nicely in with 10st. 2lb., or Boherlug. The preference, however, is for AVONDALE.

Envy disappointed his connections badly when he failed to win the Maiden Plate at Fairyhouse, and he may atone now by winning the corresponding race over the Kildare course. Etna May, the winner of the Farmers' Race at Fairyhouse; Bait, and Musical Holidays are those most likely to trouble him, but in the belief that has an easier task here than at Fairyhouse, and that the longer journey will suit him better, he gets the vote.

The other races all have distinctive interests of their own, and everything points to the meeting living well up to tradition. Selections:—

Tickell Cup—Peaceful Princess.
Kildare Hunt Cup—Merry and Bright.
Prince of Wales's Plate—Avondale.
Punchestown Cup—That's Him.
Maiden Plate—Envy.
Drogheda Plate—Irish Vein.

TOTE DOUBLE.

I.A.B.A. WARNING TO AMATEURS

RIGID RULE ABOUT PROFESSIONALISM

We have been requested by the I.A.B.A. to publish the following :—

The Irish Amateur Boxing Association desires to warn its clubs against the activities of various promoters of professional boxing and to remind Irish amateur boxers that participation in a professional contest or in tournaments organised by professional promoters will deprive a boxer of his amateur status. Reinstatement as an amateur is impossible.

The Association has had brought to its notice several cases in which amateur boxers have been led to participate in professional contests, and, having served the promoters' immediate purpose, have been afforded no further opportunities for contests. This is especially regrettable, as some of the boxers concerned, while not ranking high in amateur boxing, showed distinct promise, and would undoubtedly have made good in time if they had remained under the tuition of their clubs. They are now debarred for life from membership of the Amateur Association and have no prospect of advancement as professionals.

The Association has received letters from ex-amateurs asking for reinstatement, but such reinstatement is impossible, as the Olympic amateur rule does not admit of such.

A.B.A. TEAM FOR AMERICA

Six of this year's champions are included in the A.B.A. team to travel to America for the Golden Gloves Tournament in New York during July. The team chosen to-day is :—

Fly-weight—J. Pottinger (Gas B.C., Wales).
Bantam - weight — L. Case (Darlington). Reserve—A. Barnes (City, Cardiff).
Feather-weight—E. T. Ryan (Lynn). Reserve—J. W. Treadaway (Batterseа).
Light-weight—P. Frost (Lynn). Reserve—F. J. Simpson (Basingstoke).
Welter-weight—D. Lynch (Surrey Commercial Docks). Reserve—W. S. Pack (Polytechnic).
Middle-weight—J. Magill (R.U.C.). Reserve—J. W. Jackson (Printing Trades).
Light-heavy-weight—A. Shawyer (London Fire Brigade). Reserve—T. J. Griffin (Polytechnic).
Heavy-weight—P. Floyd (Battersea). Reserve—V. A. Stewart (London Fire Brigade).

OBIE WALKER IN LONDON

Obie Walker, of Texas, 22 years of age, the coloured boxer, is in London ready for his match with George Cook, the Australian, at the White City, London, on Monday next. Walker will finish off his training at Slough and will spar with Don McCorkindale, the South African heavy-weight.

HARVEY WINS ON POINTS

At The Ring, London, last night, Len Harvey beat Maurice Lauriot, cruiser-weight champion of France, on points. Lauriot was down for a count of nine in the first round, and Harvey, who scored repeatedly with his left, went on to score one of the easiest of points' victories.

KING BEATS WILLIAMS

Johnny King, of Manchester, the former British bantam-weight champion, gained a narrow points" victory over George Williams (Treherbert), the Welsh title-holder, in a twelve rounds contest at 9st. at Belle Vue, Manchester, last night.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Bobsleigh's Guineas Jockey

Mr. Frank Romer, the consulting surgeon to the Jockey Club, stated yesterday that he thought R. Perryman would be fit enough to ride Bobsleigh in the Two Thousand Guineas to-morrow. Perryman was injured when thrown by Robber Chief on the way to the post for the King's Prize at Epsom on Thursday.

Rentenmark Out of the Jubilee

The French horse, Rentenmark, has been struck out of all engagements, which include the Kempton Park Great " Jubilee " Handicap. Negundo and Astrophel are two French-trained horses still in the race.

Chenango Dead

Chenango, the champion hurdle-racer of the 1933-34 National Hunt season, met with a fatal accident while at exercise at Wroughton on Saturday. His engagements this year included the Chester Cup. Chenango was trained by Ivor Anthony.

J. Childs May Not Ride

It is very doubtful whether Joe Childs, who injured his ankle a week ago, will be fit enough to ride the King's filly, Fairlead, in the One Thousand Guineas on Friday. He got up yesterday for the first time since the accident, but did not think he would be able to ride this week. W. R. Jarvis, the King's trainer, stated that, in the event of J. Childs being unfit, Fred Fox would ride Fairlead.

French Classic Filly Arrives

M. Pierre Wertheimer's " classic " filly, Mesa, arrived at Folkestone yesterday from Swann's stable at Chantilly, in France. She will contest the One Thousand Guineas at Newmarket on Friday.

Racing in Egypt

A Reuter's message from Cairo states that the recent arrival in Egypt of forty horses, mainly from Great Britain and Ireland, is expected to give a fillip to racing, which is being encouraged there by the Horse-breeding Commission of the Ministry of Agriculture.

Training Quarters Changes

Doreen Jane has joined H. L. Cottrill's team at Lambourn. Sweet and Lovely is an addition to C. Pratt's string. The two-year-old filly by Diomedes out of Star Guide has left O. Bell's training establishment for Laing Ward's place at Kingsworthy, in Hants. Brown Study (4 yrs.) has been sent to the stud.

ROSSLARE'S CUP DEBUT

Keen First Round Matches at Portmarnock

By Our Golf Correspondent.

Rosslare made a most successful début in the Irish Senior Cup (Leinster Section) at Portmarnock yesterday evening. Their triumph over Foxrock, who decided on entering at the last moment, so to speak, would, however, have been expected, led as the team was by Joseph Browne, who was supported by two scratchmen, William Ffrench and Mathew Coughlan, and a 2 handicap, J. D. O'Reilly. Their aggregate handicaps is 4, whereas Foxrock's is seventeen.

The newcomers lost only one match, and it was only an excellent recovery by F. E. McKeever that prevented them winning all along the line. What was virtually a junior cup side of Hermitage put up a grand fight against Royal Dublin, two matches being halved, and two others going to the home hole, and Dublin University, drawn against Portmarnock for the third year, went down beaten 4 to 1.

SOME FINE RECOVERIES

There were a few fine recoveries. One was staged by the Hermitage player and rugby international full-back, D. P. Morris, in a surprising finish with E. L. Kidd, who completed a rather strong Royal Dublin quintette. Kidd, playing very well going out, was four up after seven holes, but he was back to one at the 11th. Morris won the 16th to square, lost the 17th, but squared again at the 18th.

Cecil West found F. J. Cooper, the Hermitage No. 1, off his game, and won at the 16th, but T. M. Healy had a match of it with Emmet Dalton, which went all the way. Out in an approximate 37, Dalton stood two up. He was still leading with two to play, but the Royal Dublin international got level at the 17th, and pulled it off on the last green.

At the turn, John McLoughlin, experimenting with a new and more orthodox grip, was three down to T. Woods, and in an exactly similar position with five to go, but then he began to play, and with " dykes " at the 15th, 17th and 18th, he won quite brilliantly, his last five holes being done in 3, 3, 5, 4, 4.

The Close champion and another international, Ffrench, played sound golf for Rosslare, but Desmond Collins recovered in great style in his match with the latter. The Foxrock man was in a parlous position at the ninth—five down—but he took the 11th, 12th and 13th in 4, 3, 4, and saved the match at the home green, having an approximate 37 for the holes in.

J. Driver, who has played but little this year, was up against hot scoring by James Mahon, of Trinity, who, turning 3 to the good, was two better than bogey for the sixteen holes. William Gill and Charles Carroll, however, nullified Mahon's win by pretty substantial margins, but James Crabbe and Roger Greene were brought to the home hole by W. P. Roper and S. J. Douglas.

Big Victories in the English Amateur Championship

A player who once astonished the golf world by a remarkable display of " fireworks " was yesterday the victim of a similar feat in the first round of the English amateur championship at Hollinwell, Notts. Three years ago W. H. Elkin, home on leave from the Malay States, did the first nine holes of the Royal St. George's course, Sandwich, in 31 strokes during his first match in the English championship. Yesterday he lost to W. C. Hewitt, a former Middlesex champion, who had a score of 41 strokes for the eleven holes played, and who won by 9 and 7.

Almost as easy a victory was gained by the holder, Stanley Lunt, who won by 7 and 6 against a fellow-Midland player, Gordon Baynton.

LAWN TENNIS

FRED. PERRY STARTS WELL

A COMFORTABLE VICTORY AT BOURNEMOUTH

Fred. Perry, champion of Wimbledon and holder of the men's singles on hard courts, made his reappearance in English lawn tennis after an absence abroad of six months in the British hard courts championships at the West Hants Club, Bournemouth, yesterday. He looked splendidly fit and won with ease. He played in his most dazzling way to beat his opponent, J. D. Morris, 6-3, 6-3, 6-1. He drove with smashing power to both sides of the court, and Morris, who did well to take seven games, could only stand still time after time and watch the ball flash past him.

By contrast, H. W. Austin, who is in the opposite half of the draw to Perry, played listlessly while beating C. R. D. Tuckey. There were no surprises in the first round of the men's singles. Daniel Prenn, the former German Davis Cup player, beat John Olliff in a match of forty-five games, while two of the South African Davis Cup team went down. W. Muir lost to F. H. D. Wilde and W. Musgrove lost to R. J. Ritchie.

Miss Dorothy Round, the holder of the women's singles, had no difficulty in beating Miss H. S. White, and the little hard-hitting South American girl, Senorita Anita Lizana, outdrove Miss Joyce Cunningham for a 6-2, 9-7 victory. Results :—

GOOD SINGLES MATCHES AT FITZWILLIAM

There were some good matches played yesterday evening in the second round of the men's singles in the Irish hard court championships at Fitzwilliam. Keeping a length and returning well, H. Kennedy, of the Anglesea Club, took the second set from H. F. Cronin, but the international's strong forehand driving carried him through the last set comfortably. F. H. Ballagh did well to beat the South African, H. F. Kamp, after a prolonged battle, and another good victory was that of E. H. Maynard over R. G. Brown. C. A. Kemp could make little impression on J. W. Lane's strong defence. Details :—

MEN'S SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIP.

SURPRISE IN THE MONTE CARLO TOURNAMENT

MONTE CARLO, Monday.

A surprise was furnished in the Monte Carlo tournament to-day, when the Australian Davis Cup pair, J. H. Crawford and V. B. McGrath, who recently won the Italian doubles championship, were beaten by the Americans, Wilmer Hines and H. W. Culley by 7-5, 6-4. Hines and Culley went on to win the championship, defeating in the final another Australian, H. C. Hopman, and the Frenchman, Marcel Bernard, by 2-6, 8-6, 7-5, 2-6, 6-4.

There will be an all-Australian final in the men's singles between Crawford and McGrath. The mixed doubles title was won by Hopman and Mme. Mathieu (France), who defeated Hines and Mlle. Belliard by 6-1, 6-4.

DONNYBROOK L.T.C.

At the annual general meeting, on 24th inst., the following officers were elected for the current season :—President, Mr. H. H. Murray; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. P. H. Stokes, T. C. Perrott, R. H. Plews; Hon. Secretary, E. A. MacNair; Hon. Treasurer, F. W. Dunlop; Hon. Auditor, R. P. H. Ardagh; Trustees, H. H. Dudley and R. H. Plews. Committee—E. A. M. Leggett, A. Fry, V. Williams, G. F. Klingner, P. Brooks, F. E. Cox.

CLONTARF PARISH CHURCH, L.T.C.

The above club held their inaugural meeting in their newly acquired grounds adjoining the parish church on Seafield road, Clontarf, on Saturday afternoon. The grounds and pavilion were declared open by Alderman J. Rubbard Clark, who was introduced by the Rev. Canon Connell, rector of the parish.

The new club has four courts and a large, well-appointed pavilion, and is affiliated to the Lawn Tennis Association. Mr. Herbert Predy and Mr. Arthur Stewart, who are responsible for the formation of the club, have been appointed Hon. Secretary and Treasurer, and as the membership is now full the new club is assured of success.

ANGLESEA L.T.C.

The above club will open the summer season (grass and hard courts) to-morrow. It is proposed to enter six teams (three men's and three women's) in the inter-club competition. Prospective new members should make early application to the secretary.

WOLVERHAMPTON WANDERERS 2
BOHEMIANS (SELECTED) 1

Visits from English League clubs are so infrequent that it was not surprising to find the appearance of Wolverhampton Wanderers attracting an attendance of close on 20,000 to Dalymount Park last evening.

The visitors included on their side " Boy " Martin and Brown, the Irish international players, whom they secured at big transfer fees from Belfast Celtic earlier in the present season. " Wolves " won 2-1, but their display was not a very impressive one, and, on their play, it is not difficult to understand why they are at the wrong end of the First Division table.

Bohemians fielded a very strong selection, and, in point of skill, they conceded nothing to the visitors, but the latter were better favoured by the luck of the game. It was not until the second half that Wolverhampton were seen at their best, and, even then, their forwards displayed little beyond speed. Their shooting was erratic, while Martin, in the centre, was generally overshadowed by Andrews, whose display at centre-half for Bohemians was one of the brightest features of a fast, but unexciting game.

The Bohemians' defence generally was a sound one, with Richards (Dundalk) and Glen giving little scope to the visitors, but, though Cannon brought off a few smart saves, he was taken by surprise by each of the shots that beat him.

One looked in vain for anything in the way of cleverly carried out attacks by " Wolves," for they relied more on speedy raids than in subtle passing. Although Brown and Jones showed plenty of enterprise, the visiting forwards were nothing out of the ordinary, and most of their moves were very stereotyped.

Rogers showed plenty of liveliness as leader of Bohemians' attack, in which Horlacher and Menton were also prominent, but Jordan, on the left wing, was weak. Irvine (Waterford) was the outstanding player in the line, and was unlucky not to have scored on a couple of occasions in the first half. His ball control was superb, and he played a big part in Bohemians' score.

The opening score came after half an hour, when Irvine sent a short pass to the left wing and Horlacher crossed for Menton to net a grand goal. The equaliser came five minutes later, when, following a throw-in on the right, Jones got possession and fired in a powerful drive that caught Cannon completely by surprise. The winning goal was netted five minutes from time, Astill scoring with a shot which Cannon should have saved.

Bohemians (selected)—H. Cannon; W. McGuire, Richards (Dundalk); Glen (Shamrock Rovers), P. Andrews, Watt (Dolphin); J. Menton, Irvine (Waterford), Rogers (Dolphin), A. Horlacher, W. Jordan.

Wolverhampton Wanderers — Utterson; Hollingworth, Shaw; Smalley, Morris, Greene; Brown, Thompson, Martin, Jones, Astill.

BELFAST JUBILEE CUP

At a meeting of the Belfast Charities Football competition last night it was intimated that the Lord Mayor (Sir Crawford McCullagh) had kindly presented a cup to commemorate the King's silver jubilee. The trophy will become the property outright of the winners of the Charity Cup this season. The draw is :—

First Round—Distillery v. Cliftonville, Monday, May 6, at Grosvenor Park, 3 p.m.

Semi-final—Glentoran v. Celtic, May 11, at Cliftonville; Cliftonville or Distillery v. Linfield, Monday, May 13, at Cliftonville or Grosvenor Park

The final will be on May 18.

CORK CHARITY CUP FINAL

SUNDAY'S WELL 11 U.C.C. 8

At the Mardyke yesterday Sunday's Well defeated University College, Cork, in the final of the Cork Charity Cup by 2 goals (1 penalty) and 1 try (11 points) to 1 goal 1 try (8 points). It was one of the brightest games seen in Cork for the season, and while there was not a whole lot to choose between them, Sunday's Well, thanks to the splendid play of the forwards, claimed sufficient advantage to make them worthy winners.

RUGBY UNION FAVOURS SOUTH AFRICAN TOUR

CAPE TOWN, Monday.

The South African Rugby Board have received a cable from the Rugby Union acknowledging receipt of the invitation to send a British team to tour South Africa next year. The Rugby Union states that they are in favour of the tour being arranged. They will now consult the other home Unions, and the decision reached by them will be communicated to the South African Board.

HUNTING

THE SCARTEEN HUNT (THE BLACK AND TANS)

This pack was out on seventy-one days to April 20th, of which one was blank, as hounds were stopped at 2 o'clock owing to storm. It was an excellent season throughout, although it would be difficult to pick out any day as being outstanding, with no remarkable points, although there were several of five and six miles.

The number of foxes killed were 23½ brace (a record), with 46½ brace marked to ground. There are no changes in the hunt staff to report.

OFFICIAL SCRATCHINGS

PROSPECTUS.

OBJECTS.—The Company has been formed for the purposes specified in the Memorandum of Association, and, in particular, to undertake and carry on all kinds of Insurance business (except Life Insurance) and all kinds of Guarantee and Indemnity business (except Bond Investment Insurance), and, in particular, without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing words to carry on Accident, Employers' Liability, Workmen's Compensation, Fidelity Guarantee, Third Party, Burglary and Robbery, Theft, Fire, Marine, Storm, Motor or other vehicle, Live Stock, Glass and Mortgage or other Investment and Transit Insurance.

SCOPE FOR THE COMPANY.—An exhaustive examination of the Insurance position in the Irish Free State reveals abundant evidence of the urgent demand for a new Irish Insurance Company to specialise in Employers' Liability and the other branches of Insurance referred to above, and it is to meet this long-felt need that the Company has been incorporated. The Directors are satisfied that an exceptional opportunity exists at present for the inauguration and development of such a Company under exclusively Irish control with adequate capital and under the most approved and conservative management.

After due examination of all available statistics of the insurance premiums paid annually in the Irish Free State the Directors have come to the conclusion that a moderate estimate of the premium income arising from those classes of insurance to which the Company will devote its activities is not less than £2,500,000 per annum, of which, it may be pointed out, Irish Companies at present secure only a very small proportion. With the widespread development of building, the extended use of Plate Glass, the continuous increase in Motor Transport—both public and private—and the steady growth of Employers' Liability Insurance, it is obvious that within a brief period the foregoing estimate will be substantially exceeded.

STATE POLICY AND NATIONAL DEVELOPMENT.—The general desire that Irish Free State Insurance should be preserved to a much larger degree than heretofore to Companies under National control is made evident by the introduction by the Government in An Dáil on the 13th December, 1934, of a Bill "to make further and better provisions in relation to assurance business and persons carrying on that business or any branch thereof, to authorise the establishment and maintenance of a system of reinsurance by the State and to make provision for other matters connected with the matters aforesaid."

PROSPECTS.—In expressly excluding Life Assurance from the scope of the Company's activities the Directors were influenced by the difficulty of building up with reasonable rapidity a remunerative volume of Life Premium Income owing to the natural reluctance of Policyholders to abandon the accrued benefits arising from Policies in force over a period of years, and attention is particularly drawn to the fact that the Company, at least in its initial stage of development, will confine its entire activities to the classes of Insurance in which the Premium Income can be most readily developed. In addition to the normal flow of new business which may be anticipated, the fact that in the main, Fire and Accident Insurances are renewable annually will enable those desiring to support the Company to transfer their Insurances to it without any sacrifice.

PROFITS.—The Directors do not propose to estimate the profit-earning capacity of the Company, but prefer to rely upon the published official statistics of British Insurance Companies as a guide in this respect. Taking the British Companies as a whole, these statistics show that for the ten year period—1923 to 1932—the ratio of Net Profit to Net Premium Income was 7.7 per cent. for Fire, 9.3 per cent. for Employers' Liability, and 6.4 per cent. for Accident Insurance, or taking the three classes together, an aggregate Net Profit ratio of 7.7 per cent. of the combined Net Premium Income. An examination made of the Revenue Accounts for the year 1932 of four of these Companies (two Tariff and two non-Tariff) engaged exclusively in the classes of Insurance which the Company is authorised to carry on, shows that for that year the total Net Profit of the four Companies was 8.1 per cent. of their total Net Premium Income.

Consideration of the information afforded by these statistics indicates that, with an income of even a very moderate proportion of the Insurance premiums at present paid annually in the Irish Free State, the prospects of the Company are sufficiently good to warrant the anticipation of satisfactory Dividends.

CAPITAL.—The present Issue of £100,000 out of the total authorised capital of £500,000 represents the amount estimated by the Directors as requisite for the first stage of the Company's development. The sum of £35,000 has been made available by the Directors and has been deposited to the account of the Accountant of the Courts of Justice, in Saorát Eireann in compliance with Statutory requirements. The balance of the present Issue, less by the amount of the preliminary expenses of the Company mentioned below, will be available as capital and will in the opinion of the Directors be ample for that purpose. The Company will receive the dividends from the investment of the said sum of £35,000 as well as upon the balance of its unused capital.

DIRECTORS AND TECHNICAL DIRECTORS.—The Company has secured the services as Technical Directors of Mr. William Boland and Mr. Joseph Brennan, both of whom have had wide practical experience in successful Insurance undertakings and as leading Insurance Brokers in the City of Dublin. Agreements have been entered into with Mr. Boland and Mr. Brennan, under which their services will be secured to the Company for a minimum period of five years.

Mr. Eustace John Sholl, who is named in Article 84 of the Company's Articles of Association as one of the first Directors, has found it necessary to retire from the Board, owing to the pressure of other business engagements. His resignation has been accepted with regret. Mr. Benham Edward Sutton, of Pinehurst, Blackrock, Co. Cork (Director of Suttons, Limited, and of other Companies), has consented to join the Board, to fill the vacancy thus occasioned.

MANAGEMENT.—Arrangements have been made to secure the services of experienced Insurance officials of proved ability to act as Departmental Managers, and every care is being taken to ensure that the Company from its inception will have a skilled organisation capable of dealing efficiently with the anticipated rapid expansion of its business.

UNDERWRITING AND ISSUE.—Under the Contract No. 3 mentioned below, the Industrial Credit Company, Limited, has agreed, to underwrite the present Issue, and to act as Issuing House for an Underwriting Commission of £1 per cent. and Brokerage Commission of £1 per cent. on the nominal amount of the Issue, exclusive of the 25,000 Shares for which the Directors and their friends will apply, and have also agreed, in consideration of a cash payment of £2,250, to defray all expenses incidental to the Issue up to and including the posting of the Letters of Allotment, but excusive of stamp duty on capital, fees payable to Bankers or Brokers, and for any legal, accountancy, or other professional assistance availed of by the Corporation preparatory or incidental to the present Issue.

STATUTORY AND GENERAL INFORMATION.

A copy of the Memorandum of Association of the Company, with the names, addresses, and descriptions of the signatories, and the number of Shares subscribed for by them respectively, is printed in the fold of the full Prospectus and forms part thereof.

The Articles of Association of the Company provide (inter alia) as follows:—

5. The minimum subscription upon which the Directors may proceed to allotment in the case of the first allotment of any shares payable in cash shall be shares to the nominal value of £7.

61. The rights and privileges attached to any class or classes of shares in the Company's capital may be modified, commuted, affected, abrogated, or dealt with by agreement between the Company and any person purporting to contract on behalf of the class provided that such agreement is (a) ratified in writing by the holders of at least three-fourths of the nominal value of the issued shares of the class, or (b) confirmed by an extraordinary resolution passed at a separate general meeting of the holders of shares of the class, and all the provisions hereinafter contained as to general meetings (save Article 67 hereof) shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to every meeting of the holders of the shares of any class, but so that the necessary quorum thereof shall be members holding or representing by proxy one-fifth of the nominal amount of the issued shares of such class, and that the holders of shares of the class shall have one vote for each share of the class respectively, and that if at any adjourned meeting of such holders a quorum as above defined is not present those of such holders who are present shall be a quorum. This Article is not to derogate from any power the Company would have had if this Article were omitted.

62. The Directors may from time to time at their discretion raise or borrow or secure the payment of any sum or sums of money for the purposes of the Company provided always that without the sanction of an extraordinary resolution of the Company the amount at any one time owing in respect of moneys so raised, borrowed or secured shall not exceed the nominal amount of the issued share capital of the Company for the time being, but no debt incurred or security given in respect of moneys raised, borrowed or secured in excess of the limit hereby imposed shall be invalid or ineffectual except in the case of express notice at the time the debt was incurred or the security given that the limit hereby imposed had been exceeded.

63. The Directors may raise, or secure the repayment of, such sum or sums in such manner and upon such terms and conditions in all respects as they think fit, and in particular by the issue of debentures or debenture stock of the Company charged upon all or any part of the property of the Company, both present and future, including its uncalled capital for the time being.

74. Subject to any special rights or restrictions as to voting upon which any shares may be issued or may for the time being be held, on a show of hands every member present in person shall have one vote, and upon a poll every member present in person or by proxy shall have one vote for every share held by him.

84. Until otherwise determined by a general meeting the number of the Directors shall not be less than six nor more than nine. John McCann of Simmonscourt Castle, Donnybrook, Co. Dublin; Rt. Hon. James MacMahon, of St. John's, South Circular Road, Islandbridge, Dublin; William Boland, of 51 Dame Street, Dublin; Joseph Brennan, of 43 Dame Street, Dublin; John Patrick O'Brien of Coolmaugh, Colemore Road, Dalkey, Co. Dublin; Count Patrick O'Byrne of Laragh, Killiney, Co. Dublin; Eustace John Shott of 26 Ailesbury Road, Dublin, and James Michael Sweetman, K.C., of Longtown Sallins, Co. Kildare, shall be the first Directors of the Company and a Technical Director shall be entitled to retain office for the period of six years from the date of the incorporation of the Company and shall not during that period be subject to retirement by rotation or taken into account in determining the rotation of Directors.

86. The qualification of a Director shall be the holding of shares in the Company of the nominal value of at least £1,000.

88. The Directors shall be paid out of the funds of the Company by way of remuneration for their services (but not including the remuneration of the Technical and/or Managing Directors or Director) such sum or sums as the Directors may from time to time determine, but not exceeding in the aggregate for any one year (a) the sum of three thousand pounds together with a sum equivalent to the income tax thereon at the standard rate for the time being or such larger sum or sums as the Company in General Meeting may from time to time determine, and such remuneration shall be divided among the Directors in such proportions and manner as the Directors may determine and in default of such determination, equally.

89. The Directors shall be entitled to be repaid all travelling, hotel and other expenses incurred by them while engaged upon the business of the Company or in attending or returning from Board meetings.

101. The Directors may from time to time appoint one or more of their body to be Managing Director or Managing Directors of the Company, and may likewise appoint one or more of their body to be Technical Director or Technical Directors of the Company. Every such appointment may be either for a fixed term or without any limitation as to the period of office, and the Directors may from time to time (subject to the provisions of any contract with the Company) remove or dismiss any Managing Director or Technical Director from office and appoint another in his place.

103. The position of a Managing Director or Technical Director shall from time to time be fixed by the Directors and may be by way of salary or commission or participation in profits, or by any or all of those modes.

The following Contracts have been entered into by the Company:—

No. 1. Dated 27th March, 1935, between the Company and Mr. William Boland. Service agreement.

No. 2. Dated 27th March, 1935, between the Company and Mr. Joseph Brennan. Service Agreement.

No. 3. Dated 27th March, 1935, between the Company and The Industrial Credit Company, Limited. Underwriting agreement.

The Directors are interested in the promotion of or in the property to be acquired by the Company as follows:—

The Company has entered into the above-mentioned service agreements with Mr. William Boland and Mr. Joseph Brennan as Technical Directors.

The preliminary expenses, including underwriting commission, brokerage, cost of incorporation of the Company, and fees to Brokers and Bankers are estimated at £8,000, which will be paid by the Company.

If any application is not accepted in full, the surplus paid on application will be applied towards the amount payable on allotment; and any balance returned to the applicant. If no allotment is made, the amount paid on application will be returned in full.

Payment may be made in full on or after allotment, but no discount or interest will be allowed on such prepayment. Failure to pay any instalments when due will render the amounts previously paid liable to forfeiture and the relative allotment liable to cancellation. Interest at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum may be charged on amounts overdue.

Share Certificates will be ready for delivery in exchange for fully-paid Allotment Letters, on and after the 1st day of July, 1935.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company, of the above-mentioned Contracts, and the original of the above-quoted letter from the Department of Finance, may be inspected at the offices of the Company's Solicitors, during business hours on any day while the List of Subscriptions remains open.

A brokerage at the rate of 3d. per Share will be paid to Bankers, Stockbrokers, and Financial Houses on all Shares allotted to the public in respect of applications bearing their stamp.

Applications for Shares should be made on the accompanying Form and lodged with the Royal Bank of Ireland, Limited, Foster Place, Dublin, and Branches, together with a cheque for the amount payable on application.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application may be obtained from any of the Company's Bankers, Brokers, or Solicitors; from The Industrial Credit Company, Limited, 9 Leinster Street, Dublin; or from any Bank or Stockbroker in the Irish Free State.

Dated this 24th day of April, 1935.

Financial News & Notes

DUBLIN IRREGULAR

RISE IN BANK STOCK

DUBLIN TRAMS DULL

Contrary to general expectations, the new account opened on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday with only moderate activity. Locally there was no decided trend, and, although there were a fair number of quotations in British Industrials, the market was actually extremely quiet and easier for choice.

Free State Funds were irregular, but Land Bonds tended higher. British Funds were weak and War Loan fell 6s. 3d. to 106½ sellers.

Banks met with good support in places, and Bank of Ireland jumped two points, while Nationals and Provincial Old added fractions.

Guinness Ord. closed unchanged after opening firmer, and Dublin Distillers' issues were supported at steady levels.

In Rails, Great Northern Ord. advanced to 8¾, and Great Southern Deb. to 73.

Dublin Trams moved up to 111s. in the earlier dealings, but later some selling brought about a sharp fall to 108s. 6d., and the Pref. fell 2s. 6d.

Local Newspaper Preferences were well maintained, but May Roberts Ord. relapsed to 1s. 4½d. discount, and the Preference to par. Textiles showed a harder appearance, but Tobaccos tended to give way.

Ford Motors improved to 34s. 10½d., and Dunlop Rubbers to 42s. 10½d. x.d., but Imperial Chemicals, Lever 7 per cent., and Vickers Ord. were all easier inclined.

LONDON UNCERTAIN

GILT-EDGED DECLINE

Although the new account commenced with rather less business than had been expected, there were some good features on the London Stock Markets yesterday. Outstanding was pronounced speculative activity in Aircraft shares, due to the belief that the British Government may speed up and extend its construction programme. Other bright spots were the Foreign and British Rail groups, but the general tone was irregular.

A reduction in the volume of buying and some profit-taking were responsible for a setback in the Gilt-edged market. Old Consols showed the largest movement, the final quotation being a point down at 88¾, and declines of ⅛ occurred in both War Loan and 3½ p.c. Conversion Loans, and Local Loans dropped ¼ to 96½. India stocks fell back in sympathy with Gilt-edged. Uncertainty, due to the latest developments in Germany, was apparent in the Foreign Bond section, and most movements were unfavourable. Germans were sold and dropped back sharply, the Dawes Loan finishing 2½ down at 64½, and the Young Loan at 44¼ was 3½ lower.

The decision of the Railway Assessment Authority that a nil assessment should appear in the completed railway valuation roll in respect of the L. and N.E.R. was a favourable influence in the British Rail market, and at the close most issues were higher. In the Foreign Rail section activity was chiefly confined to Argentine Stocks, which continued to rise in the hope that some of the Commission's recommendations will be carried out.

The activity in Aircraft shares overshadowed other sections of the Industrial market, but movements generally favoured holders. There was a big demand for all the leading Aviation issues, and with the shares in short supply prices rose sharply. Elsewhere Motor shares were stimulated by good trading reports, and Building issues continued to attract attention, and advanced.

In the Mining groups most Kaffirs became easier owing to the fall in the price of gold and in anticipation of smaller profits for April. West Wits. and Vaterspaats, however, were strong exceptions, due to buying on hopes of further development results. Silver shares were active, but profit-taking sales predominated, especially after the further fall in the metal price. Talk of an early increase in petrol prices here was responsible for active dealings in the market for Oil shares, and most issues showed improvement.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS

Rice Price Record

Not for five years has the price of Burma rice been so high. On Saturday quotations for certain qualities touched 276 rupees at Rangoon. A keener demand from the Far East and the price of silver are held to be responsible.

Canada and the Price of Silver

The rapid rise in prices of shares of Canadian mines producing silver, which stirred the Stock Exchanges after the advance in the world price of silver, was checked at the end of the week by some profit-taking and the fall in the price of silver. There has been a distinct quickening of interest in mines which, in addition to minerals such as gold, lead, zinc and cobalt, produce a certain quantity of silver.

"Twin" Eagles

Pending the hearing of the company's appeal against the decision of the Tribunal Superior, Mexico City, in the Amatlan case, the directors consider it wise further to postpone consideration of the payment of the dividend on the First Preference shares of the company for the half-year to 30th April, 1935, and also consideration of the dividend for the year to 31st October, 1934. In the circumstances the Canadian Eagle Oil Company, Ltd., have similarly postponed consideration of the payment of the dividends on the First Preference shares of that company for the same period.

Coming Announcements

Many company announcements of special interest are due soon. Included are the following:—Distillery Company reports, V.O.C. dividend, Union Bank of Scotland report, P. and O. interim dividend decision, Wilson and Clyde Coal dividend, William Dixon report; Alexander, Fergusson and Co. report, United Premier Oil and Cake accounts, Chersonese Estates report, Niddrie and Benhar Coal dividend, Maubre and Garton interim, Park Gate Iron and Steel dividend, British Match Corporation dividend, Wall Paper interim dividend, Stewarts and Lloyds report, More Insurance results, William Beardmore report. It is anticipated that the Burmah Oil Company will intimate in a few days the date of its dividend announcement.

Big Irish Insurance Issue

It is gratifying to note that very substantial interest has been taken in the first big Irish insurance flotation in the Irish Free State—namely, the issue of 100,000 shares of the Insurance Corporation of Ireland, Limited. The list of subscriptions opened yesterday morning and one-half of the total was promptly subscribed. This, of course, did not include the subscriptions in transit at the close of banking hours. As already announced, the list will remain open till to-morrow, so as to give the public the fullest opportunity of taking up the whole 100,000 shares on issue. We understand that numerous inquiries for insurance have already been received by the new company.

Lena Goldfields

The Court has now ordered meetings of the creditors of the Lena Goldfields to consider a scheme of arrangement which provides for the distribution of the moneys, and Government obligations payable by the Soviet Government in compensation for taking over the company's properties in Russia. The meetings are to be held at Winchester House, London, E.C., on May 14. As is known, an agreement was reached towards the end of last year by which the Soviet Government has agreed to pay to the company £3,000,000 sterling, payable as to £50,000 in cash and £2,950,000 in Government obligations. Apart from the £50,000 the company has no assets, nor has it any secured creditors.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET

AIRCRAFT ISSUES TO THE FORE

Cheerful conditions again prevailed in most sections of the Industrial market yesterday, when the new account started, and, while some irregularity developed in places, movements generally favoured holders. Interest centred mainly around the Aircraft issues on the belief that the Government will decide to speed up its air construction programme. Rolls-Royce and De Havillands made the best showing, though a demand was also noticeable for Hawkers and Faireys and a few of the low-priced shares.

After displaying some uncertainty the trans-Atlantic counters came in for renewed support from Wall Street in the late dealings, and finished with a firm appearance.

*Close in New York, 4.83½.

"Emmies" remained on the quiet side, and finished around 28s. Cable and Wireless stocks seemed rather undecided; the Pref. were quoted ex div., and closed around 84½. Aviation and kindred descriptions continued prominent, a keen demand being attributed to hopes of increased orders.

ROLLS-ROYCE STRONG.

Rolls-Royce were a particularly strong spot, being bid up 4s. 4½d. to 122s. 6d. De Havillands continued in request, and rose just over three shillings to 63s. 9d. Fairey Aviation put on 2s. 3d. to 27s. 9d., and advances of 1s. 6d. were shown by Hawker Aircraft.

Some good features were also provided in the Motor group, due to favourable trading reports. Singers were strong, rising 2s. 9d. to 11s. 6d. Firmness continued to be displayed by Electrical Equipments. Crompton Parkinson were again prominent. On talk of a possible forthcoming bonus the shares put on a further 2s. 6d. to 47s.

VICKERS IN REQUEST.

A satisfactory tendency prevailed among Iron, Coal and Steel descriptions, with business on a fair scale. Vickers were in request, a steady demand taking the price up 10½d. to 11s., while the tax free "reference strengthened to 25s. 9d.

Tate and Lyles were again a bright spot among Provision and Catering issues, gaining 2s. further to 110s. 6d.

Marks and Spencers made a satisfactory showing in the Drapery and Departmental Stores section, rising to 5 ex the dividend. Woolworths held around 107s. 6d.

COTTONS FIRM.

Textiles, on the whole, were moderately maintained. English Sewing Cottons met with further buyers, and left off finally 9d. to the good at 43s. 9d. J. and P. Coats were another firm feature, improving to 66s. 3d., but Fine Cotton Spinners were a shade easier.

Artificial Silks remained quietly firm.

British Celanese Second Preference improved to 17s. 3d., but the Ordinary slipped back to 9s. 6d., and Canadian Celanese lost ¼ to 4½. Courtaulds held around 52s. 3d.

Breweries displayed some irregularity, but they were not without bright spots. Guinness came in for renewed attention, and finished 1s. 3d. to the good at 141s. 9d.

PROFIT-TAKING.

The Tobacco leaders were subject to profit-taking. "Bata" gave way to 6, Carreras "A" to 7⅞, and "Imps" to 6⅞, while Gallahers and Godfrey Phillips also finished slightly easier. Tobacco Securities Trust Deferred and United South Deferred also lost ground to a fractional extent.

DUBLIN GAS FIRM.

Alliance and Dublin Gas put on 3 to 143. With few exceptions, Miscellaneous issues again made a good showing.

Dunlops were marked down to 42s. 6d. ex div. on consideration of the full report.

OILS FIRM

Following the cheerfulness which developed on Friday last, accompanied by a general rise in prices, the Oil share market started the new account in promising fashion. Firmness was displayed at the opening, and as the day progressed the market gained strength, prices closing at the best.

A feature of the business transacted was that it was almost entirely local in character, there being little doing in Continental account.

In the arrangement of the final details of the carry-over nothing of special interest transpired, the open position, being small and quite easily arranged. The general charge for the continuation of bargains was 3½ to 4½ per cent., exceptions being Royal Dutch, which were done at 2-3 per cent., and the Eagle issues, which were arranged on the basis of 3-4 per cent. Shells finished rather givers, but there were takers of Anglo-Persians and Burmahs.

VENEZUELAN SURPRISE.

Shortly before the close the market received a surprise in the shape of an announcement by the Venezuelan Oil Concessions. It had been generally anticipated that a final dividend of 7½ per cent. would be declared on both the Ordinary and Participating Preference shares. Instead, it was announced that a final of 6½ per cent. is to be paid, making 11½ per cent. for 1934, against 10 per cent. for 1933. In addition, however, there is to be a return of capital on both classes of 6s. 8d. per share in cash, representing capital in excess of the requirements of the company. This news led to active bidding, and at the close both shares were up ½ at 24⅜.

RUBBERS LOWER

Little business was transacted in the Rubber Share Market yesterday, and movements were against holders. Jugra Land lost 9d. to 11s. 1½d., while United Sua Betong and Tandjong Malim were both 6d. lower. Several issues were quoted ex dividend, among them being Rubber Trust, London Asiatic and Batu Tiga. Quiet conditions prevailed in the commodity section, with spot rubber selling down to 5¾d. per lb. United Kingdom stocks of rubber have increased by only 25 tons during the past week.

IRISH CATHOLIC CHURCH PROPERTY INSURANCE COMPANY

RECORD OF YEAR'S PROGRESS

"A FINANCIAL POSITION OF EXCEPTIONAL STRENGTH"

LARGE ADDITIONS TO RESERVE FUNDS

The thirty-third annual ordinary general meeting of the Irish Catholic Church Property Insurance Co., Ltd., was held yesterday at the offices of the company, 19 and 20 Fleet street, Dublin.

Mr. Wilfred FitzGerald, chairman of the company, presided. The following directors were also present:—Mr. Ambrose Aliaga Kelly, the Rev. John Robert Maguire and Mr. Valentine Irwin.

Mr. Valentine Irwin, manager and secretary, read the notice convening the meeting, the minutes of the previous annual ordinary general meeting, and the auditors' report, which was as follows: "We have examined the foregoing accounts and balance sheet of the Irish Catholic Church Property Insurance Company, Ltd., for the year ended 31st December, 1934, and have obtained all the information and explanations we have required. We have verified the investments of the company. The balance sheet is, in our opinion, properly drawn up, so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the company's affairs according to the best of our information; and the explanations given to us, and as shown by the books of the company, and we certify that no part of either of the above insurance funds has been applied, directly or indirectly, for any purpose other than the class of business to which it is applicable."

THE CHAIRMAN'S ADDRESS

The Chairman said: I am very glad once again to have the opportunity of addressing you and reporting upon the affairs of the company during the past year, which was the thirty-third year of its existence. When the accounts of each of the preceding years were made up and submitted the board were able to announce to the shareholders that under every head of income there had been a further expansion in the company's business. It is a pleasure to be in a position to tell you that, in that respect, the year 1934 forms no exception to those which have gone before. The increase in the fire premiums has been satisfactory and is consistent with the steady progress which has characterised that department throughout the life of the company. On the other hand, fire losses have not amounted to quite so much as in the previous year.

NEW WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

In drawing your attention to the figures in the employers' liability insurance account, I should like first to say that, since we met here last year, new legislation has imposed additional responsibilities upon employers, and has considerably extended their liabilities. A revision of rates became necessary as a consequence of this change, and the new rates have been operative since 1st August last. Their effect is to be observed in an increase of almost £1,000 in the income from employers' liability premiums. But before we are entitled to look upon that increase as a matter for satisfaction, we must examine whether the claims ratio of the department concerned has been affected, either favourably or adversely, by the altered condition of things. Such an examination will reveal that the amount paid for claims shows an increase of 80 per cent. over the amount of the claims in the previous period. I, however, anticipate that there will be an improvement in the claims ratio when the effect of the revised rates over a full yearly period is capable of being ascertained.

INVESTMENT OF THE COMPANY'S FUNDS

A further notable feature of the company's accounts is the income derived from investments. In that respect there has been little change in the nett income from our statutory deposit investments. But the net amount received by way of interest on our general investments shows an increase of 10 per cent., and this increase is partly attributable to the reduction in the rate of income tax.

While on this subject I think it well to mention that when dealing with the investment of our funds, it is not easy at present to obtain a desirable rate of interest. This is due to the fact that the current market prices of securities such as provide suitable investments for a company like ours, stand at levels which yield only a very low return. Last year I pointed to the fact that we had widened the range of our investments so as to include ground rents in the Irish Free State, and we have thought it appropriate to extend that policy. Such investments commend themselves not merely on the ground of a more attractive return, but also upon the consideration that, when carefully purchased, there is little risk of depreciation.

It will be of interest to you to learn that the market value of our Stock Exchange securities is well above the value at which it stood at this time last year. You know that in the past, when the value of Stock Exchange securities was steadily falling, we provided against actual and possible depreciation by building up a very substantial Investment Reserve Fund. That fund remains in our balance sheet undisturbed. But the value of our securities has improved so much in recent years that the fund is now far greater than present depreciation. During the year the company's assets increased by £7,908 to a total of £155,300.

DISPOSAL OF THE SURPLUS

Now we come to the disposal of the surplus, which is shown by the report to be £11,415 19s. 10d., after having made provision for all claims, expenses and other contingencies. Security for our policy-holders continues to be the first consideration on the part of the Board, and, therefore, it will be seen that £2,915 19s. 10d. has been added to the Fire Insurance Fund, bringing up that fund to a total of £58,525; £1,000 to the Employers' Liability Insurance Fund, bringing it to £26,286, and £3,000 to the General Reserve Fund, which now stands at £15,000.

A further £1,000 was utilised to meet the customary dividend of five per cent. per annum, free of income tax, which was issued as usual on the 31st December, and we request that this payment be now confirmed. The residue of the year is £3,500 and is £500 greater than the residue of the preceding year. We recommend that this residue of £3,500 be distributed in the manner directed by our constitution for charitable, religious and benevolent purposes.

Gentlemen,—It will, doubtless, be a great satisfaction, both to shareholders and to policy-holders, to note that year by year the company grows ever stronger, and it is plain that these accounts, disclose a financial position of exceptional strength.

I have the honour to move "that the report of the directors and the accounts for the year ended 31st December, 1934, be and the same as hereby received and adopted, and that the dividend already paid on the shares of the company at five per cent., clear of income tax, for the year ended 31st December, 1934, is hereby approved and confirmed."

The Rev. J. R. Maguire said that he had very much pleasure in seconding the motion. He thought they would agree with him that the report was very satisfactory.

The resolution was passed unanimously.

RE-ELECTION OF DIRECTOR AND AUDITORS

On the motion of Mr. A. A. Kelly, seconded by Mr. William F. Howley, the Rev. J. R. Maguire, who retired in rotation, was unanimously re-elected a director of the company.

The Rev. Father Maguire returned thanks for his election for the second period as a director. He hoped, he said, that he would be able to give the same services to the company that he had given in the past. Last year had been a very onerous one. The new Workmen's Compensation Act had thrown on them a great deal of labour, and the working of it had been troublesome both for themselves and their policy-holders. The effect of the new legislation was still in doubt, and it would be some little time before the results of its operation were known, because very often the medical fee were in excess of the amount payable in compensation for the injury received, and it would appear as if the medical fees were going to be a serious item in future payments. Of course, that was a serious matter for employers, and, therefore, for the company.

On the motion of Mr. J. D. FitzGerald, seconded by Mr. William F. Howley, Messrs. Kean and Co. were elected the auditors of the company for the ensuing year.

THANKS TO THE STAFF

The Chairman proposed a vote of thanks to the managing director (Mr. Valentine Irwin) and the staff for the manner in which they had conducted the business during the past year.

Mr. J. D. FitzGerald said he had much pleasure in seconding the proposal.

The vote of thanks was passed unanimously.

Mr. Irwin, acknowledging the vote of thanks, said: Gentlemen I am very grateful to you for that part of the vote of thanks which refers to me, and I wish to thank our Chairman for voicing the approval of the board and of the meeting regarding the work carried out by the staff. I should like to say that it has been noticeable that the help of the staff has been given willingly, and in such a way as to make quite plain their earnest desire to promote the interests of the company, and I thank you on their

LONDON MINING MARKET

WEST WITS. AND VENTERSPOST STRONG

Quiet conditions prevailed in the Mining market on the resumption of business yesterday. The accumulation of public orders over the week-end was painfully small, political uncertainties preventing any expansion of speculative activity, while as regards professional operations dealings were restricted, not only by the absence of outside interest, but also by the approach of the settlement.

As a matter of fact the open account in all departments proved extremely small, and the arrangement of the carryover presented no difficulties, accommodation being readily forthcoming. In these circumstances, it was somewhat surprising to find Kaffirs mostly on the down-grade.

Exceptions were provided by West Wits. and Venterspost, both of which advanced sharply on what was obviously Cape support. Rhodesians were better inclined.

Leading Diamonds were dullish, as were also the outside Coppers. West African prices were mostly allowed to drift.

An undecided tendency developed in the Australian department. Wiluna were wanted for investment, and Lake View and Star appreciated, though in regard to the latter some ambiguity characterised the latest development results.

Tins were mostly idle in sympathy with the metal, but Mawchi marked a recovery. Elsewhere Silver shares were affected by the vagaries of the metal. Burmas closed higher, but the others, after modest fluctuations, mostly finished easier.
